R.F.C. PRESIDENT FOR $150,000,000 MORE FOR RELIEF

Charles A. Miller Says
$300,000,000 for Loans to States Will Last Until June.

DEMAND FOR AID IS INCREASING

Favors General Terms of Wagner Bill to Liberalize
Law—Illinois to Need Funds Soon.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Appropriation of an additional $150,000,000 for direct relief loans to states was recommended to a Senate committee today by Charles A. Miller, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation president endorsed in general terms the Wagner bill to liberalize the law under which his organization administers relief, testifying that the demand for aid is increasing.

He opposed, however, the provision proposing to throw wide open the entire resources of the corporation for relief loans to states, saying it would handicap efforts to stimulate local relief work.

Miller testified that the present $300,000,000 fund would last until June and that an additional $150,000,000 "would carry us through to the long session."

Miller said that one state is within six weeks of exhaustion of its quota which under the present law is $45,000,000. He did not name the state, but committee members understood he referred to Illinois, which has borrowed about $38,000,000.

Miller emphasized he was expressing his personal views, saying that the board felt it should not favor or oppose "legislation adding or subtracting from its function."

He favored the "idea throughout the bill" before the committee. The measure would not only expand the funds for direct relief, but would set up a fund of $10,000,000 for aid to wanderers and liberalize the law in several other directions.

Miller termed the relief situation well handled up to the present.

"The states seem to be well served," he said, of the handling by the corporation of its relief funds.

Wagner asked if the demand for relief through the states was going to increase, and was told "more and more must be provided."

Miller added that "a limit is practically necessary" on the fund for loans to states because of the willingness to let the Federal Government handle the situation.

"We have been trying to stimulate local effort and then supplement it by national help," he said. "At present the relief being extended is not inadequate. I won't say it is not an unshared for human because some won't ask for help, but the wants of the country are shared for."

Miller testified that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had made an effort "not to pinch pennies" but "said 'the situation is so serious that any fellow who wastes a dollar is a traitor.'"

He recommended that in adding $150,000,000 to the fund for State relief grants to states, he said that "many of the substandard or sweatshop plants are, in effect, being subsidized by Federal, State and private relief funds."

Senator Lewis (Dem.), Illinois, speaking from the Senate floor, approved the bill, said the Government seemed blind to the danger of revolution and that certain members of the corporation's board had tried to obstruct relief to "those of the substandard or sweatshop plants to 'those formerly of power.'"

Seeks Funds for Washington.
A vivid story of cold and hungry children in the national capital, was given by the committee by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, wealthy editor of the Washington newspaper. She appealed for Reconstruction Corporation funds for the capital.

Mrs. Patterson said she did not believe the reports of distress until she accompanied relief workers on a personal investigation.

She quoted stories of distress among school children but said they

T. W. MILLER GETS BACK HIS CITIZENSHIP

Rights of Convicted Alien Property Custodian Restored by President.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—President Hoover today signed a certificate restoring citizenship to Thomas W. Miller of Wilmington, Del., former alien property custodian, who served a sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for frauds arising out of his handling of some of the property.

Miller was convicted of defrauding the Government in a case based on the payment to Richard Merton, a German subject, of $6,453,978 in connection with the sale of the assets of the American Metals Co., seized by the Government during the war. He was sentenced to 18 months.

Application for the restoration of Miller's citizenship rights was signed both by the District Attorney and the Judge who presided at his trial.

A former Secretary of State of Delaware, and later a member of Congress from that State, Miller has been active recently in the affairs of the American Legion, and last summer received the purple heart decoration.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOWS FOR GROUNDHOG IF HE COMES OUT

According to Legend There Will Be Six Weeks More of Winter.

If the groundhog, who is supposed to follow legend by emerging from hibernation on Candlemas day, came out of his hole on schedule today, he saw his shadow, for the sun shone brightly in a clear sky.

Legend has it that if the groundhog, a natural born weather prophet, sees his shadow he immediately knows that six weeks more of winter impends, and dashes back into his burrow for more sleep. If it is cloudy, and he sees no shadow, he stays outside, confident that spring is near.

Official forecasters, who work by more scientific methods, have no confidence in the groundhog's legendary ability to predict the weather. The groundhog tradition comes from rural England, where climatic conditions differ widely from those of the Mississippi Valley.

ATTEMPT TO RUSH GOV. PARK'S BILLS THROUGH BLOCKED

Opposition in House Holds Up 13, While Only Three, of Minor Consequences, Are Perfected.

BALKS PLANS OF PARTY LEADERS

McCawley Wants to Know How Many of the 50 Measures Were 'Dropped in Governor's Lap.'

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—Opposition to bills in Gov. Park's administration legislative program, which has been developing since the more than 50 bills were introduced in the two houses of the Missouri Legislature, has blocked plans of House leaders to drive through 18 of the measures, and forced 13 of these bills to the informal calendar for further consideration.

House members who caused the bills to be laid over, when they were called up, declared they were entitled to have time to study the bills, and to be informed whether the bills actually were practicable and were desired by the Governor. Objection was raised to driving the bills through in a group.

Three bills were perfected, all of slight value. One repeals a virtually inoperative law relating to boiler inspection, another transfers control of the State Museum in the Capitol from the Museum Commission to the Board of Permanent Seat of Government, which has charge of the building, and the third transfers administration of the State Seminary fund from the Seminary Commission to the State Board of Education, merely abolishing an ex-officio board made up of elective State officers. Every bill of any consequence in the group was sent to the informal calendar.

Speaker Meredith and Floor Leader Keating today admitted that the undercurrent of opposition, which has been developing, would hamper their plans to rush the bills through.

Part of the opposition arises from the fact that some of the bills included by the Governor in the program were not originally proposed by the Governor, but were taken from legislative recommendations of the Committee on Taxation and Governmental reform, a voluntary research committee organized by a farm organization, and made up largely of rural members of the Legislature.

Representative McCawley of Jasper County, who caused several of the bills to be laid over, said the House members were entitled to time to give the measures proper consideration.

"We do not feel that we should be required to take these bills almost as a group," McCawley said. "Some of them are good, some of them are bad."

"We also are entitled to know whether these bills actually are desired by the Governor," he said, and which were dropped in his lap by someone else. I will stick by my party and I am willing to vote for all of the Governor's measures, if and when we know the bills are authentic and have the stamp of the administration."

Keating, who introduced the bills in the House, said all of the 13 bills in the series he had called up for perfection had been handed to him by the Governor for introduction.

House leaders thought they had the machinery geared to rush the bills through. The Governor's bills in the House had been referred to a special committee, headed by Representative McCormick of Platte County, the Governor's home county. Brief hearings were held and they were reported favorably in a group Tuesday night.

The desire of the committee for speedy action was indicated by the fact that it voted at one session to report favorably on all the bills in its possession, with one exception.

15 PRIZE DOGS POISONED
NORTH HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 2.—Three of 15 prize Dachshunds poisoned at the Dachshund Kennels here were recovering to day at a veterinary hospital, while county police sought the destroyers of the dogs valued at $600.

Twelve of the dogs, the largest and strongest, apparently died because they were able to crowd the weakest three away from the poisoned meat. The kennels, operated by Fred A. Vodegel, are for the exclusive breeding and boarding of Dachshunds. When the dogs were liberated yesterday from the separate kennels into a common enclosure, they made for a pile of meat left there during the night. The poison worked quickly and one after another of the valuable dogs died. One of the dogs, Elger Lens Assmannhagen, was the property of Mrs. J. J. O'Donnell of New York, was valued by his owner at $1500.

Argentine Kidnaping Victim Back.
MARCELLO MARTIN JR., son of a wealthy Rosario business man, said by police to have been kidnapped, returned home yesterday. Police said they thought ransom of $25,000 had been paid.

FRED C. BONFILS, PUBLISHER OF THE DENVER POST, DIES

One of the planners of Guthrie, the first capital of the new territory, and made his first big stake there, and in a townsite development in the Texas Panhandle. Repealing Kansas City, he went into a lottery enterprise, but got out of it when the Federal Government started prosecution.

He appeared in Denver as chief proprietor of the Post, in 1890, and soon entered into what became a prolonged feud with Thomas M. Patterson, former United States Senator, and publisher of the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Times.

Circulation claims of the two papers developed charges by Bonfils that Senator Patterson was "deliberately lying" about the circulation of the News and Times. Patterson retorted with a purported exposure of Bonfils' record before his appearance in Denver.

On the day after Christmas, 1907, Bonfils met Patterson at the street near the State Capitol Building, and knocked him down, threatening, Patterson said, to kill him if further attacks on his character appeared in the News and Times. Patterson followed, intensifying the feud.

With his partner, Tammen, Bonfils strove to keep both the news pages and the circulation schemes of the Post in the center of public interest. "We expose a lot of things," Tammen said in an interview given while on tour with his circus, "though half the time," he added, "we may not know what we're talking about. We run a band for boys, furnish them the instruments, the uniforms and the instruction—all the parents have to do is furnish the boys. We have a motto in the floor of our business office, 'O Justice, When Expelled From Other Habitations, Make This Thy Dwelling Place.' If a man wants to laugh at that, it's all right with us; if he takes it seriously, it's all right for him."

In December, 1899, both Tammen and Bonfils were shot and wounded seriously by W. W. Anderson, an attorney, who was tried three times but never convicted. The Post had accused Anderson of taking advantage of Alfred Packer, known then as the "man-eater," who had been arrested a year before when he battled his way through snowdrifts from the snowbound mining camp of Lake City, Colo., and told of being forced to subsist on the flesh of his fellow prospectors.

The paper fought the Denver Union Water Co. in its effort to get a new franchise. In this connection, enmity arose between Bonfils and T. J. O'Donnell, a lawyer, and one day in February, 1914, O'Donnell and Bonfils fought with fists on the Courthouse steps, and O'Donnell drew a revolver, but Bonfils seized his arm before he could fire.

Knew of Teapot Dome Deal.
Bonfils had advance knowledge of the secret deal between Harry Sinclair and Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior, by which Sinclair obtained a lease on the Teapot Dome oil reserve in Wyoming. His paper, the Post, printed an attack on the lease, headed, "So the People Know." The Post declared that Sinclair and his associates had "received a gift of one of the richest proven, but undeveloped, oil fields of the United States, through trickery that verges on crime." The Post sent a reporter, D. F. Stackelbeck, to New Mexico, where the reporter found evidence of Secretary Fall's sudden affluence. Stackelbeck's report of facts was not published in the Post, Bonfils explaining after the fact that he feared libel suits. It came into the hands of Senator Walsh of Montana, and led to the investigation in which Fall's "little black bag" deal with E. L. Doheny was uncovered.

It developed later that, about this time, in September, 1922, Sinclair settled a suit in which Bonfils and Tammen were interested, paying $250,000 to the plaintiff, who was under an agreement to pay $100,000 of the amount to Bonfils and Tammen. The Post's attacks on the oil lease caused and laudatory article about Sinclair appeared in the Great Divide, the Bonfils-Tammen weekly paper.

The Rocky Mountain News, then conducted by John C. Shaffer, charged that "the temper in the Teapot has been stifled by dollars." The later inquiry showed that Shaffer received $250,000 from the $1,000,000 disbursements by Sinclair to the Pioneer Oil Co.

Bonfils and Shaffer were questioned before the Walsh committee, and both denied that the payments to them were understood by them as being intended to silence their papers. The American Society of Newspaper Editors investigated the incident, and a committee brought in a report condemning both Bonfils and Shaffer and recommending that the former be expelled from the organization—Shaffer was not a member. The directors of the society deferred action on the committee's report and Bonfils resigned from membership, closing the incident.

wanted their names withheld because they were afraid of incurring the displeasure of Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, who, he said, insisted there were no hungry children.

"We offered to start a fund with $5,000 to feed the children, but he turned us down," he said. "He didn't want to bother."

Chairman Brookhart called before the committee late in the day two witnesses he characterized as examples of "the forgotten men."

Both men, Sidney M. Smoot and Charles F. Volts, of Washington, testified that they were unemployed. Smoot said he had been out of regular work since 1929, but had been told by relief agencies they would not furnish him with work. Volts testified that he had been out of regular work since 1929, but had been told by relief agencies they would not furnish him with work.

'SOME CROOKEDNESS GOING ON,' FISH SAYS
By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Urging adoption of his resolution to investigate the failure of corporations that have obtained loans from the Reconstruction Corporation, Representative Fish (Rep., New York) today told the House Banking Committee that "there is some crookedness going on."

Fish said the Illinois Life Insurance Co. of Chicago and the Union Indemnity Co. and the Union Title Guaranty Co., both of New Orleans, had failed within a short time after getting big loans from the Reconstruction Corporation.

Fish was asked by Representative Hancock (Dem.), North Carolina, whether R. S. Hecht of New Orleans, a director of the Union Indemnity Co., president of the Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. and chairman of the Reconstruction Corporation Advisory Committee there, was not "closely associated with Senator Huey Long."

"I didn't want to bring up Senator Long's name, but now that it has been brought up," Fish said, "I want to say I have had hundreds of letters on this subject."

Fish said the Illinois Life Insurance Co., headed by J. W. Stevens and other members of the Stevens family, had obtained loans totaling $1,125,000 from the Reconstruction Corporation. The last loan was advanced on Oct. 22, 1932, he said, and the insurance company failed on Nov. 23.

The Union Indemnity Co. and the Union Title Guaranty Co., Fish said, had received "more than $4,000,000 altogether." He added that a portion of the loans to the Union Indemnity Co., which failed on Jan. 6, after receiving a Government loan on Dec. 28, had been used "to pay a loan it had received from Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. of New Orleans."

Chairman Steagall of the Banking Committee, who is being boomed by Senator Long as Secretary of the Treasury in the incoming administration, said with regard to the Louisiana Senator's reported association with Hecht that "any member of Congress might get into the same situation by referring someone to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan."

ance. If by Government activity we can restore the balance we will have taken a great step forward. "The normal trend now is in agriculture. For those who have had experience in agricultural work I think we will do well to provide a living."

Without reference to notes or books but with an occasional glance at a huge map, Mr. Roosevelt unfolded his idea for the Tennessee Valley experiment. There is no doubt he has been studying the proposition for days.

He said he selected the Tennessee watershed running over the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina and parts of Kentucky, Alabama, and Mississippi for many reasons, principally because of its wide range of physical conditions, life and climate. The area includes 640,000 square miles.

He believes the proposition of reclamation can be carried out immediately and with its work provided for 50,000 to 70,000 men in planting new trees, cutting and rehabilitating vast forest lands.

Through the development of huge flood control basins, beginning at Cove Creek Dam he estimates the power to be produced at Muscle Shoals can be increased to between two and three million horsepower.

As a result of the flood control development, Mr. Roosevelt expects great stretches of rich bottom lands to be restored to the use of farmers—land to replace the eliminated and non-profitable marginal acres.

"Attacked from angles," he said, "this whole proposal should give work eventually to about 200,000 men. We have been going at these various factors in a piecemeal way ever since the days of T. R. (Theodore Roosevelt) and Gifford Pinchot. Now is the time, I feel, to tie up all the various developments into one great comprehensive plan within a given area."

He preferred not to involve the power issue in the first exposition of the project. Nor did he go into details about the future use of the nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals. He is looking now at a vast, broad visionary scheme and he wants to carry it into effect as soon as possible.

Government purchase of some of the forest lands and of those marginal areas which would be retired from agricultural pursuits is contemplated in the Roosevelt program.

"I regard it as a safe investment," he said, "to borrow money to buy and take care of land of this character. The money would come back through the sale of crops. It is necessary that we act for we are now consuming three and four times as much timber as we are producing."

WOLL ADVOCATES U.S. LICENSING OF INTERSTATE FIRMS

Vice-President of A. F. of L. Also Would Remove Restrictions of Sherman and Clayton Acts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—A plan whereby all corporations doing an interstate business would be incorporated nationally and licensed by the Federal Government was advanced last night by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

"It is the further suggestion," he told the Bond Club of New York, "that such licensing be upon approved terms and conditions voluntarily agreed to by essential factors and units within a given industry, or as may be imposed by the national Government in the absence of a voluntary agreement."

"In that way an effective regulation may be established wherein organized industry, labor and Government will contribute equally of their experience, knowledge and administrative abilities."

He said the proposal might sound "advanced," but that it was put forward years ago by the late President Taft.

"It must be clear," he said, "that unless industry is shortly revived, unless our processes of falling wages, prices and values are arrested, our national Government will ultimately be required to assume title to and operate private properties and institutions, and upon such a broad and extensive basis as will amaze even the most ardent advocate of Socialism and certainly give weight to the advocacy of Communism."

He asserted that America's "load of national credit and growing indebtedness" was becoming "almost a crushing burden on productive industry."

He said that what the United States needs is "greater economic independence."

He called for the removal of the legal restrictions which the Sherman and Clayton acts impose on industry. "If we are to recreate an early return to prosperity and maintain our nation on a permanent basis of well-being," he said, "we must encourage and build an order, relationship and practice wherein the distribution of surplus of industry will find more and more expression in higher wages and lower prices, and less and less in the form of dividends, interest and other forms of compensation to capital."

HOUSE PUTS CURB ON FREE TELEGRAMS FOR MEMBERS
These Cost U. S. $30,000 Last Year; Now Limited to Business Messages.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—House members are getting a little daily personal training in economy so far as the privilege of sending free telegrams is concerned.

In the last fiscal year more than $30,000 was spent to pay for telegrams which members sent. When this became known to the House Accounts Committee, a halt was called.

The committee, headed by Representative Warren (Dem.), North Carolina, decided to put rigid restrictions on telegrams that could be sent free. Consequently, members of the House have been told that no longer will the Federal treasury pay for "book telegrams" containing "extraneous" language, but sent to several persons. Nor are messages of condolence paid for. Only actual business messages, the committee ruled, could be charged to the Government.

Many members have stepped over the line since the new rules were approved. They have been called into the Accounts Committee office and told that they must pay for the questioned messages. The bills range from a few dollars to hundreds of dollars. Many members object, but in the end they all pay.

Chapin Calls on Industry To Put Men Back to Work

Secretary of Commerce Urges Business Leaders to Develop Co-Operative Program of "Vast Re-employment of Labor."

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Saying property cannot return unless millions of workers are again added to the payroll, Secretary Roy D. Chapin, of the Commerce Department, in an address here last night, called on business leaders to units in a co-operative program for a "vast re-employment of labor."

He called re-employment the first problem of business in the United States and said it was up to business to solve it so that the expanding payrolls might come through an increasing volume of trade instead of "from the Federal Treasury." The program should be ready by spring, he said.

He saw "substantial grounds for a moderate, reasonable hopefulness" for a business revival. The reasons he gave were a need for replacement of obsolete equipment, exhausted and deteriorated stocks of goods, and a "desire to buy" if even a slight increase in the workers' income can be brought about or if the present hesitancy can be replaced by a more hopeful, restorative mind.

Other things "that appear to offer some measure of hope," he said, were the "recent vigorous resistance to further deflation," the results of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's work and the "stabilization" of the new Federal Home Loan Banks.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—A report advocating reorganization of the business and industrial system was approved by the Ohio pastors' convention last night. The convention, sponsored by the Ohio Council of Churches, was attended by 500 clergymen.

The report dealing with economic conditions was submitted by the Rev. E. E. Scully of Columbus, who declared "the present capitalist system is headed for the rocks," and that its elimination is "inevitable."

The report urged "shorter working days, profit-sharing between capital and labor, no decrease in wages unless dividends are decreasing, give age pension, abolition of child labor, increase in public works, immigration restrictions be continued, Federal control of stock exchange, increased socialization of natural resources, and revamping of the whole business and industrial system."

IRLINGTON, Mo., Feb. 2.—The Bank of Irlington, the Iron County Bank here and the Bank of Arcadia Valley in Arcadia were closed temporarily by their directors today to consolidate as one depository. Notices distributed by the three banks said they would be closed during an inventory of assets, after which the consolidated bank would be opened.

The Iron County Bank had deposits of $338,796, capital of $100,000 and surplus of $20,000 at the time of its last statement on Dec. 10, 1932. The Bank of Irlington had deposits of $127,351, capital of $15,000 and surplus of $6,000. The Bank of Arcadia Valley had deposits of $103,679, capital of $25,000 and surplus of $5,000.

The new bank probably will be opened in Irlington. The three banks are the only depositories in the counties, which are only a short distance apart.

RALPH SEWER LAW REPEAL IS UPHELD IN SUPREME COURT

Four Wellston District Property Owners Denied Mandamus to Force Building of System.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The Supreme Court, in a decision today, upheld the repeal of the Ralph law, enacted in 1927, which gave the city of Wellston the right to build a sewer system.

The decision, holding the repeal constitutional, was written by Judge Ellison, all the other Judges of the court concurring. It held that the eight St. Louis County sewer districts formed under the Ralph law were governmental agencies exercising police power delegated by the State. The power, the opinion went on, could be withdrawn or the districts changed or abolished at the will of the Legislature.

Exercise of Police Power.
"The repeal," said the court, "is a law enacted in the exercise of the police power undoubtedly amounting to a legislative declaration of the paramount consideration of public welfare call for its abolition. The 1931 statute was as much an exercise of police power as the law repealed."

"The State has the power to enforce reasonable police regulations measurably affecting the liberties of people not alone with respect to their personal conduct and rights but with respect to use and enjoyment of their property as well as without the allowance of compensation for such restrictions."

No Vested Right.
Property owners in the Wellston Sewer District had no vested right as the result of preliminary sewer planning, the Court held in ruling on one phase of the suit. The Court did not go into the merits of the provision in the repealer that districts which had incurred obligations for preliminary work must levy taxes to meet these bills.

The repealer became effective Sept. 14, 1931. Condemnation proceedings had reported in Circuit Court on May 27, 1931, that benefited by the charged property in the Wellston Sewer District would be $45,850.65. The suit argued that construction could not be stopped since the district had carried out work this far before the repealer took effect, but the Supreme Court did not accept this view. The suit also attacked the repealer on several technical points.

In December, 1931, the Duke of Manchester, ninth Duke of the title, was married at Greenwich, Conn., to Miss Kathleen Dawes, former actress in England. The previous Duchess of Manchester obtained a divorce, which had become final 10 days before the second marriage.

The Duke had planned that the ceremony be performed by his friend, former Mayor Walker of New York, but legal technicalities made the wedding in New York state impossible.

Four Wellston District Property Owners Denied Mandamus to Force Building of System.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The Supreme Court, in a decision today, upheld the repeal of the St. Louis County or Ralph sewer law. The Ralph law, enacted in 1927, was repealed by the Legislature in 1931. The suit attacking the repeal was brought by four property owners in the Wellston Sewer District, St. Louis County, who sought a writ of mandamus to compel the district to build its sewer system.

BELLEVILLE WOMAN IS 101 YEARS OLD

Wishes Visitors 'Pocket Full of Money and Celler Full of Beer.'

Beaming over a birthday cake studded with 101 candles, Mrs. Bridget McLaughlin recalled today her girlhood days in Ireland, regretted that her 102-year-old sister, Mrs. Catherine Kerwick, couldn't be with her to celebrate her birthday at the St. Vincent's Home for the Aged at Belleville, and wished visitors "a pocket full of money and a cellar full of beer."

Mrs. McLaughlin, who remarked she attributes her longevity partly to drinking a glass of beer nearly every day, said she'd like to do an old-time jig, but "my bones are just a little too stiff."

So she sang a song—about "Daniel O'Connell, Ireland's Finest Man"—and recited some doggerel she composed, informing her guests that "My name is Bridget Lee, Ireland is my nation, Bridget Valley my dwelling place and heaven my expectation."

Cutting the big cake, which was prepared by the sisters who conduct the home, the For Handmaids of Jesus, she said cake was just the right birthday present for her. Last year she wanted 100 bananas for her birthday, and she got them—one at a time.

Her sister, Mrs. Kerwick, lives in Carlinville, and will be 102 on June 27. She came to this country in a sailing vessel in 1848, and Mrs. McLaughlin, who is a widow, followed 30 years later.

Both sisters are alert and retain their faculties to an unusual degree. They are the survivors of eight children, the youngest, James Lee, having died six years ago at the age of 93.

Mrs. McLaughlin entered the home two years ago and her sister was there for a time.

'CANADIAN' BEER PLANT IN MISSOURI IS RAIDED AGAIN

No Evidence Found in Old Appleton Brewery, but Two Truckloads of Contraband Are Seized.

The Old Appleton Brewery at Old Appleton, Mo., source of much of the "real Canadian" beer sold in St. Louis, was raided by prohibition agents early today after two loaded beer trucks had been seized when leaving the plant, 110 miles south of St. Louis.

No beer was found by the agents when they entered the plant but 200 cases and 27 half-barrels of brew found on the trucks were seized.

Deputy Prohibition Administrator Dillon and his men posed themselves shortly after midnight on roads leading north and south out of the town. At 2:35 a. m. they stopped a north-bound truck which proved to be carrying the half-barrels. The driver, arrested, said he was Ben F. Dawley of East St. Louis.

An hour later agents saw another truck leave the brewery and followed it south to the edge of town, where it was stopped. Its cargo was 200 cases of beer. Its driver said he was Edward Schmidt, 1023 Tillie avenue, St. Louis.

The agents then raided the brewery for the third time since last May. This time no beer was found. Theodore Meyer, old-time brewmaster, was ordered to appear before a United States Commissioner in St. Louis tomorrow, however, and meantime Dillon intends to ask for conspiracy warrants for him and the two truck drivers.

Meyer was arrested in raids on the brewery last May and last August, but charges against him were not pressed because of legal defects in the search procedure.

Until two years ago the brewery had a Federal permit to make and dealcoholic beer. After two raids in which irregularities were found, however, it was forced to give up its permit. Its continued operation was disclosed in the raids of May and August, long after its permit had been revoked.

TWO MEN CAUGHT REMOVING PAVING BLOCKS FOR FUEL

Police to Ask for Warrant Charging Malicious Destruction of Property.

Noticing two men prying up wooden paving blocks near 1700 Bradley street last night, Patrolman Martin Beyer stopped to see what was going on. The men, who had cleared a space about three feet square with a crowbar and had loaded the street in front of her home, told him they were collecting firewood.

"We had no coal and no money to get any, so we decided to take the paving blocks," they said. Both gave the same address on Howard street. They were taken to the North Market Police Station. Police will ask for a warrant charging malicious destruction of city property.

CITY SANITARIUM OVERCROWDING CITED

Grand Jury Like Its Predecessors Calls Attention to Need for More Space.

The December grand jury, like many of its predecessors, in its final report today recommends that the proper authorities take immediate steps to correct overcrowding at the City Sanitarium, which at present houses 3400 insane patients in space intended for 2200.

O the sanitarium the report states: "Upon investigation of this institution it was found that it is well kept and splendidly managed, but horribly overcrowded. The superintendent is making an extraordinary effort to correct certain bad conditions, which have existed in the past. The sanitarium was found to be clean and everything seemed to be running in an orderly manner. The big trouble is the housing problem. Dining rooms must be used for bedrooms at night while small rooms, hardly sufficient for one patient, are now used to take care of as many as three patients. A complete and careful survey is recommended."

Hospital Commissioner Lohr has repeatedly recommended a $15,000,000 bond issue for extension and additions to city institutions, stressing the difficulty in rendering adequate treatment under present conditions.

After inspecting the House of Detention, where juveniles are held, the grand jurors expressed satisfaction with conditions there. The report calls attention to condemnation of conditions at the institution by previous grand juries, and remarks that "the former unfavorable state of affairs had been remedied."

The police radio and research departments are praised in the report, which points out that the radio has been responsible for the apprehension of many criminals, who otherwise would have escaped arrest. The research department is praised as an important modern aid to crime solution.

"In conclusion," the report states, "the members of the grand jury wish to call attention to the excellent record of the Circuit Attorney's office during the last four years. This record builds confidence in the entire field of law enforcement and encourages the police to continue their cooperation with the Police Department and Circuit Attorney Miller."

The grand jury, headed by J. Clark Street, returned 25 true bills, five no true bills and examined 209 witnesses.

WOMAN SEEKING $7500 TELLS OF PROPOSAL

Miss Martin's Deposition Filed in Action Against Dr. Signorelli.

Miss Sallie Martin, 4664 Labadie avenue, who is suing Dr. Andrew J. Signorelli for $7500, alleging breach of promise, testified she asked her to marry him more than seven years ago, when he feuded she was about to move from the neighborhood of Cass avenue and Hogan street, where both lived.

Her deposition, filed today in Circuit Court, was taken in December by Dr. Signorelli's counsel. The suit was filed last Oct. 25, a week before Dr. Signorelli was married to Miss Lily Sciales, 7448 Wydown boulevard.

Dr. Signorelli was a student when he first spoke of marrying her, in September, 1925, Miss Martin testified. They had become acquainted through neighborhood contacts, she said, and Dr. Signorelli, who lived at 1811 Cass avenue, frequently took his school books with him to 1323 Hogan street, where she lived.

When Dr. Signorelli learned that the woman with whom she lived was to be married, Miss Martin testified, and that she might go elsewhere to live, he suggested that they marry.

"We were supposed to be married the next day," she said, "but the next day nothing was said about it." No other date was set for the marriage, Miss Martin said, and she could not recall that Dr. Signorelli had ever written to her about marriage.

COMMISSION SOUGHT FOR UNIVERSITY CITY

Citizens Hold Meeting and Hear Speakers Urge Change in Form of Government.

A group of University City residents, dissatisfied with what was termed the "wrangling at City Hall," met last night to begin campaigning for a change from the aldermanic to the commission form of government.

"There is one thing about the commission form of government," Roy C. Sutton, chairman, told the gathering of about 100 who attended the meeting. "If the people are dissatisfied with the officials elected, they have the right of referendum and recall. And if ever there was the need for exercise of referendum and recall it is now in University City, when—"

The rest of his sentence was lost in applause from the audience. Speakers last night were City Attorneys J. C. Hoester of Kirkwood and Alva C. Trubrod, Webster Groves, who explained the operation of a commission government. Since adoption in their respective communities, they agreed, it had been a means to lower taxation, wider public improvements at less cost, more efficient and business-like government with a surplus in the financial department at the end of the year instead of the deficit previously shown under the aldermanic system.

Objections to the plan, expressed as a matter of academic argument by George M. Hager, an attorney of University City, were answered by the speakers at the conclusion of their formal talks. A resolution was adopted forming those who attended the meeting into the Commission Form of Government Citizens' Committee of University City. It was agreed that the city manager plan would be investigated and considered.

The meeting held at Masonic Hall, Delmar boulevard and Trin-

DESLOGE HOSPITAL TO OPEN TOMORROW

New 13-Story Building on S. Grand Cost $2,000,000—Rooms for 238 Patients.

The $2,000,000 Firmin Desloge Hospital, 1813 South Grand boulevard, will be opened tomorrow, with the transfer of 35 patients from St. Mary's Infirmary, 1538 Papin street.

The 13-story hospital has facilities for 238 patients. Its equipment embraces the latest technical advances, including, for example, the largest electro-magnet ever built for the removal of metallic foreign bodies. To the original gifts of more than $1,000,000 by the family, in accordance with the will of the late lead magnate, Firmin Desloge, Mrs. Desloge added a $100,000 chapel, with a Calvary by John Angel, probably the finest piece of religious sculpture in this part of the country.

St. Mary's Infirmary will reopen in about a month as a Negro hospital, announced the Rev. Alphonse M. Schwialla, S. J., dean of St. Louis University's School of Medicine. The university students' health service and the clinics of Firmin Desloge Hospital are in operation, and the dental clinic is to be opened in about two weeks.

Dr. Ralph A. Kinsella, chief of staff at St. Mary's Hospital, has been appointed chief of staff and head of the department of internal medicine in the new hospital, with Dr. Goronwy O. Brown as director of the out-patient department and Dr. William T. Coughlin as surgeon in chief. Sister Mary Florentine of Mount St. Rose Sanatorium has been appointed superintendent, with Sister Mary Athanasia as director of nursing and associate dean of St. Mary's unit of St. Louis University School of Nursing.

PLEA IS MADE TO ROOSEVELT IN INAUGURAL WORK DISPUTE

Asked to Support Union Leaders Seeking $11 a Day for Erecting Reviewing Stands.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—An officer of the Carpenters' Union today appealed to President-elect Roosevelt to intercede in a wage dispute that grew out of erection of inaugural parade reviewing stands in front of the White House. Mr. Roosevelt was asked in a telegram to throw his influence behind union leaders who are demanding an $11 daily wage for workers who are being paid only $8 by the contractors.

George Myers, business manager of the Carpenters' Union, who made the appeal, said the question involves a precedent related to the law requiring that the prevailing wage scale of a community shall be paid on Government construction work. The prevailing scale in Washington has been fixed at $11 and is being paid on numerous Government projects now under way.

Myers has contended that the inaugural stands constitute a Government project, but Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the Inaugural Committee, said it is not as it is being paid for privately. Myers, however, feared that payment of the $8 wage would be construed as reducing the prevailing level, leading to a cut on Federal projects.

Myers said he has attempted to call a strike of inaugural stand workers, but the men have refused, and have been suspended from the union.

1,322,587 DEATHS IN U. S. LAST YEAR, DROP OF 10,969

1107.5 to Each 100,000 Persons as Compared With 1133.1 in 1931.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Thirteen persons died every five minutes in the United States during the last year.

The proportion remained the same as during the year but there was a sufficient change in the totals of the two years to reduce the deaths to each 100,000 from 1133.1 in 1931 to 1107.5 in 1932. The Census Bureau reported 1,322,587 deaths last year and 1,343,556 in 1931.

The figures showed heart disease, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage and pneumonia as four of the principal causes. Influenza caused 31,701 deaths in 1932 and 23,066 the preceding year. The report showed 20,088 suicides as compared with 18,361 in 1931, and 11,150 homicide victims compared to 10,617.

Exclusive of the 1651 who lost their lives in collisions between trains and automobiles, automobile accidents caused the death of 30,042, as compared with 29,080.

SCHOOLGIRL, 15, LEAPS FROM FOURTH FLOOR WINDOW

New York Pupil, 15, Seriously Injured—Had Been admonished About Late Hours.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—After being admonished for keeping late hours, Mary Thomas, 15-year-old schoolgirl, leaped from a window of her aunt's fourth-floor apartment in Third avenue today.

She was taken to City Hospital suffering from a broken leg and possible fracture of the skull and internal injuries from which it was feared she might not recover.

Margaret Lannon, the aunt, told police that she had frequently spoken to the girl about late hours without result and last night the niece came home late again. This morning the aunt said she rebuked her severely and warned her not to be late again tonight.

"I won't be home at all," the girl replied, and a few minutes later jumped from the window.

SENATOR WOULD APPREHEND MYSTERIOUS MR. BULLITT

Robinson of Indiana Charges He Is Ahead in Disguise Negotiating on Debits.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—In the Senate today Robinson (Rep.), Indiana, demanded that the State Department "apprehend" under the Logan act, William C. Bullitt, who has been reported negotiating on debts abroad.

Reading from accounts of Bullitt's visits to Berlin, London and Paris, Robinson said Bullitt "is going about in disguise and when not in disguise he is going under an assumed name."

"He is not representing the American Government. He seems not to be representing the President-elect. He certainly is not representing the Senate or the House."

Robinson said he believed the Logan act providing $5000 fine or three years of imprisonment for any unauthorized person having intercourse with a foreign government on measures affecting the United States was "broad enough" to cover Bullitt's supposed activities.

Logan (Dem.), Kentucky, suggested something be done "to protect the junior Senator (Robinson) from Indiana, whom I have seen day after day worrying himself over this question to such an extent he can not carry on his duties as a Senator."

William C. Bullitt, as known in Washington, is a former newspaper correspondent, assistant in the State Department, 1917-1918, member of the American Peace Commission, 1918-19; went on special mission to Russia in 1919 and is author of "It's Not Done."

HOUSE LIMITS TRADE BOARD INQUIRIES TO THOSE IN HAND

Increases Appropriation, but Beats Cochran's Motion to Permit New Investigations.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The House today increased the appropriation for the Federal Trade Commission from $510,000 to $801,478. The teller vote on the amendment by Representative Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama, was 111 to 85.

Just previously, however, the House voted down a proposed amendment by Cochran, St. Louis Democrat, to increase the Trade Commission appropriation to $1,000,000. This would have allowed the carrying out of proposed new commission investigations.

The Bankhead amendment provides only for the carrying out of inquiries now under way, including that into public utilities.

SENATOR WISDOM EXTOLS VIRTUES OF RACE BETTING BILL

At Committee Hearing, He Says Love for Agriculture
Moved Him to Sponsor Measure.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—State Senator Carroll Wisdom's bill to legalize betting on racing in Missouri—at a much lower revenue rate than is exacted in other states—was laid over for further consideration last night by the Senatorial Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence.

Senator Wisdom was the only one to speak in favor of his bill, which, he implied, would probably apply principally to horse racing. There was no opposition, although many persons and groups have declared themselves not in favor of the measure because it would permit racing of greyhounds, spaniels, maltese cats or caterpillars, if anyone could be found to bet on that kind of a contest.

Wisdom, whose home is in Bowling Green, Pike County, asserted again that his interest in the racing bill was prompted by his over-riding love for agriculture, and particularly for members of the rural 4-H clubs. He pointed out that half of the revenue from racing would go to promotion of county fairs, 20 per cent to 4-H clubs and 20 to animal husbandry.

His Farm Argument.

"I won't get anything from this bill," he told the committee—"not a cent. But it would tickle me more to see some little girl or boy leading one of those 4-H calves with about a $50 bill tied onto the harness—that would tickle me more, gentlemen, than I can tell you."

"Think of it, gentlemen of the committee, 50 per cent to county fairs, 30 per cent to 4-H clubs—those little boys and girls that lead calves around—and 20 per cent to animal husbandry."

"I want the committee to think about this bill. To discuss it and diagnose it. I want it to have a fair chance. Fees? Why, Illinois collects a tax of $2500 a day from race tracks. Maryland takes a straight 3 per cent. The fees in this bill are lower. Yes, that's right, $300 a day for cities with less than 500,000 population and $800 for cities with more."

"But I don't think Missouri can pay the fee that Illinois can, and I set the figure less for cities under 500,000 because I figured that money nowadays is hard to get, and I did think that St. Louis, with double the population of Kansas City, could support a track to pay the higher rate—or something like that."

(A race track near Kansas City is operated by adherents of the organization of Tom Pendergast, newly-risen power in State Democratic politics.)

Illinois permits its tracks to retain 6.5 per cent of what is bet.

No Penalty for Violation.

Senator Joffe of Kansas City, a committee member, pointed out that while the bill prohibited operating a track without a license, there was no clause providing a penalty for violation. "I must have forgotten it," Wisdom said. "I tried to put as many teeth in it as possible and there's probably just as many as I forgot."

Then Joffe showed that the bill did not prohibit racing of other animals, including dogs. "I didn't want to prohibit anything," Wisdom quickly asserted. "If it prohibited playing baseball in the rain, that'd seem like just the place to play. Let's leave that up to the commission that this bill creates, gentlemen. I've tried to provide for appointment of the highest type of men."

"They could refuse to issue permits to dog tracks if they wanted. Dog track operators, who are enthusiastically in favor of the Wisdom bill and who were in Jefferson City two weeks conferring about it and lobbying in favor of the proposed law, were nowhere in evidence last night."

The Criminal Jurisprudence Committee also voted favorably on Senator Brogan's bill to make holding a stake in a vager a misdemeanor instead of a felony. Brogan said that country districts sent many prisoners, on pleas of guilty, to the penitentiary for this offense, rather than pay their keep in the county jail. A bill similar to this was passed two years ago but was vetoed by Gov. Caulfield.

OKLAHOMA CROWD PREVENTS FORECLOSURE SALE OF FARM

North Dakota Bill Provides for Action on Farm Output, Distribution, Legislation.

BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 2.—Provisions for banding together agricultural states for "mutual benefit and protection" are contained in a measure introduced in the North Dakota Senate.

Under the bill a legislative committee of six would present a plan to legislatures and officials of other states, and when adopted by five or more states, a "national federated, legislative, co-operative, agricultural association" would be formed. Each state would be entitled to three Commissioners, all of whom must be farmers, to take "group action on all questions of agricultural production, distribution and legislation." Maintenance of a lobby at Washington during sessions of Congress would be authorized.

Escort Insurance Attorney Out of Town Though He Offers Full Amount of Judgment.

CHEROKEE, Ok., Feb. 2.—More than 1000 farmers, shouting "there'll be no mortgage foreclosures in Alfalfa County," stopped auctioning of a widow's farm and escorted the representative of a mortgage holding concern out of town yesterday.

The representative, Ancel Greer of Kingfisher, Ok., attorney for the Equitable Life Assurance Society, offered to bid in the quarter-section for the full amount of an $8400 judgment against Mrs. Julia Jones. The farmers tried "no compromise" and forced Greer to leave. He offered no resistance.

Greer was hustled into a motor car belonging to Murray Coppock, Deputy Sheriff, which was appropriated by the farmers. The farmers set Greer afoot a few miles out of town when the car lost a wheel. Many speakers addressed the crowd, condemning "the crushing heel of capitalism" and demanding indefinite postponement of foreclosures.

PARDONED YOUTH ASKS FOR AID FROM STATE

Maurice Taff Says Family Spent All of Savings Getting His Release.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—Maurice Taff, former St. Louisan who served 11 months of a 10-year prison sentence for robbery before he was pardoned last Dec. 12 by Gov. Caulfield as innocent of the crime, appealed to the State last night for relief.

Appearing before the House Appropriations Committee to ask a special relief appropriation, he declared that his parents spent all their savings in obtaining his release, and that they also mortgaged their small Jefferson County farm to obtain funds to establish his innocence.

Taff, who will be 21 years old this month, was accompanied to the hearing by his attorney, Arthur U. Simmons, and Chief of Police James Ryan of Maplewood.

Taff was arrested May 9, 1931, at Boland drive and Harter avenue, in Richmond Heights, in company with William L. Elsemann, then 18, and another youth. All were quoted by the police as admitting they were preparing to hold up a confectionery at the intersection when they were arrested on suspicion. On an admission from Elsemann that he had thrown away a weapon as policemen approached, a .32 caliber revolver was found in the weeds near the place where they were arrested.

Elsemann, who admitted participation in three robberies and a burglary, was sentenced to 10 years in the reformatory. Taff was identified with him as one of the pair who held up Mrs. Helen Bendorich and Mrs. Mae Schoenfeld in a dry goods store at 6401 Arsenal street on April 4, 1931.

Taff denied the charge in his trial, but Mrs. Bendorich held her identification and he was sentenced to 10 years in the reformatory. Elsemann testified that his accomplice was not Taff, and later in a supplementary confession declared he was assisted by his 15-year-old brother, Donald, who thereupon pleaded guilty in Juvenile Court and was paroled.

With this development the Maplewood Order of De Molay, of which Taff had been a member, began a movement for a pardon. Circuit Attorney Miller and Circuit Judge Ryan, who presided at the trial, joined in the opinion that he was innocent. At the time of his pardon Taff's home was at 4222 McRee avenue. He now lives with his mother on a farm near Hematite, Mo.

SUIT TO REMOVE RECEIVERS AND THEIR THREE ATTORNEYS

Apartment House Bondholders Ask That Disinterested Persons Be Appointed.

A motion to remove the two receivers for the 17-story apartment at 625 South Skinker boulevard and their three attorneys was filed in Circuit Court today in behalf of a bondholders' committee which says it represents about 75 per cent of the bondholders.

The receivers and their attorneys were appointed by Circuit Judge Hall. E. W. Banister and Oliver J. Kratz are receivers. The attorneys are R. H. McRoberts, Earl Susman and George Barnett. McRoberts, the bondholders allege, owns all the stock of the Skinker-Northwood company, which issued the bonds, and Banister is his father-in-law.

The bondholders' committee asks that one disinterested receiver and one attorney be appointed to take charge of the building. There are outstanding about $670,000 in bonds, and the committee says it represents the owners of $503,100 of these.

Judge Hall said he had appointed Kratz and Barnett after the other appointments had been made because some creditors asked for a disinterested receiver and attorney. McRoberts said no fees have yet been paid in the receivership.

LOS ANGELES OBTAINS $22,000,000 R. F. C. LOAN

Expected to Provide 2000 With Work for Two Years in Building Line From Hoover Dam.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation today agreed to lend Los Angeles $22,000,000 for construction of an electrical transmission line from Hoover dam to that city. The loan is expected to provide employment for more than 2000 for two years or more.

The city has planned to get power from Hoover dam. The loan makes this possible.

This is the second large loan Los Angeles has received. The first was an agreement by the corporation to buy $40,000,000 of bonds of the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, which includes about a dozen cities surrounding Los Angeles as well as that city.

DECLINE IN SCHOOL COSTS

22 Per Cent Reduction in Last Three Years.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—It costs 14 cents less a day now to educate a child than it did in the scholastic year of 1929-30.

This is the estimate of the Federal office of education. A statement yesterday said there had been a 22 per cent reduction in cost in the last three years. During the present scholastic year the cost per child per day in public elementary and high schools is 48.7 cents. Three years ago it was 62.8 cents.

With this development the Maplewood Order of De Molay, of which Taff had been a member, began a movement for a pardon.

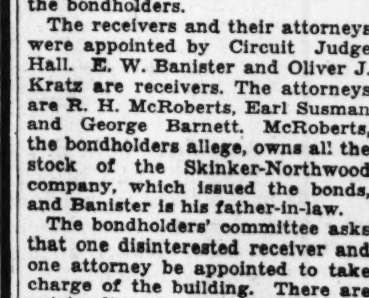

Circuit Attorney Miller and Circuit Judge Ryan, who presided at the trial, joined in the opinion that he was innocent. At the time of his pardon Taff's home was at 4222 McRee avenue. He now lives with his mother on a farm near Hematite, Mo.

Have you ever tried aborting a cold?
The system is rid of it! Try the lemon juice treatment. Squeeze two full-size lemons in a large glass of very hot water and drink without sugar. First, take three tablets of Pape's cold compound an hour apart.
This clears the head, dries the nasal passages, reduces any fever. The lemon juice then neutralizes acidity, and helps build up the system. Medicine is best. This treatment will often abort a cold overnight. One cold compound tablet will often check a cold for several hours; then when night comes you can get real relief and often abort it. Any druggist has Pape's cold compound. It's perfectly safe. Try it, and you'll never go back to half-way remedies.

HE WORRIES AND WORRIES!

—can't imagine why he feels so peopless—so run-down

Slipping on the job—and in these days, too. No wonder he worries! He can't figure out what's wrong—why he wakes up more tired than when he went to bed—what causes that constant dull headache—that aching, peopless, half-alive feeling. Yet the answer is ridiculously simple. Ten to one there's nothing really wrong—nothing he cannot easily correct in just a few days.

It's ASTHENIA

Millions are in the same lamentable plight today and not one in ten can guess the cause.

That's the insidious thing about Asthenia... it drags you down, slows your mind, robs you of your joys and pleasures, yet you hardly realize you're slipping.

Would you like for once to brush the cobwebs from your eyes—be ready and eager for any task—experience all the glories of this glorious old world? Then rid yourself of Asthenia and stay rid of it.

You think that you're not the least bit clogged—you say that you're "regular" as can be—but physicians will tell you that it is only too easy to deceive yourself in this respect and stay doped with poisons. Thus millions of micro-organisms accumulate in the intestinal tract and produce that dull, aching, peopless feeling known as Asthenia.

Decide right now to turn the tables on Old Man Gloom. Take

CHAIN STORE TAX BILL IS HELD IN COMMITTEE

House Group at Jefferson City Hears Advocates; Opponents May Appear Wednesday.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The House Committee on Criminal Justice deferred action last night to next Wednesday afternoon on the House bill proposing a graduated schedule of State license taxes for chain stores. Opponents of the measure will be heard Wednesday. The bill, introduced by 46 House members, provides for annual license taxes on all owners of two or more retail stores or mercantile establishments, ranging from $25 to $200 a store, depending on the number of stores in the chain. Representative Damon of Kansas City, one of the sponsors of the bill, said it was intended both for revenue and to help curtail the number of chain stores. He estimated that license fees would produce about $700,000 in revenue a year.

Charles M. Hay of St. Louis and James A. Potter of Jefferson City, representing independent dealers in gasoline and oil, urged the committee last night to recommend an amendment exempting gasoline filling stations from provisions of the bill. They said the oil industry already was heavily taxed and should not be subjected to the proposed license fees. The committee took the suggestion under advisement.

Representatives of several organizations of retail merchants urged favorable action on the bill, declaring it a protective measure for local merchants and charging that the chain stores did not pay their proportionate share of local taxes. No opponents of the bill appeared last night.

ANCILLARY RECEIVER NAMED FOR CANDY STORES HERE

William Gillispie to Handle Affairs of Units in Martha Wash.

An ancillary receiver to continue operation of Martha Washington candy stores in Eastern Missouri was appointed yesterday by Federal Judge Faris on application of a creditor. The Martha Washington Candies Co., placed in receivership in Chicago last September, has two stores in St. Louis.

The ancillary receiver, William Gillispie, who is also ancillary receiver for Western Missouri, alleged that some of the stores were about to be sold by the main receivers and that an ancillary receivership was necessary to preserve the assets for creditors.

WESTLICHE POST ELECTION

Dr. Otto Sandler Chosen President by Employees.

Dr. Otto Sandler, managing editor of the Westliche Post, now owned by its employees, was elected president of the publishing company yesterday. Edmund Morotini was chosen vice-president and Arthur E. Seil secretary and treasurer. These, with Fred Spraul, Frank Amein, George Schoening and Robert Pabitzky, constitute the board of directors. The paper, a German language daily, was turned over to its employees Tuesday by the former owners. Oscar E. Buder, principal owner, said he and his associates surrendered their stock without consideration and the employees assumed the assets and liabilities of the company.

GET RID OF INDIGESTION IN A FEW MINUTES, OR

Get Your Money Back

"Be-careful" and milk of magnesia only make your indigestion worse in most cases as they weaken the digestive acid in your stomach, so it cannot digest properly.

Pepto-Bismol does not upset your stomach. It relieves indigestion gently in a few minutes by stopping the scouring of food in your stomach and the decay of food in your bowels. The medicine in Pepto-Bismol which stops souring and decay, are four of the finest medicines known to physicians. Read them on the bottle.

Also, Pepto-Bismol is not a patent medicine. It is a prescription by The Norwich Pharmacol Company, whose line of medicines has held the respect of physicians, surgeons, hospital nurses and druggists for nearly 80 years.

If Pepto-Bismol does not get rid of your indigestion, distress after eating, heartburn and sour, acid stomach, in a few minutes, get your money back from your druggist. Delicious Pepto-Bismol is harmless. Price 50c. Ask him for Pepto-Bismol by name. Look for the name Pepto-Bismol on the bottle. Refuse the unfair offer of "something just as good" which may hinder, instead of help your digestion. Ask for Pepto-Bismol by name and get what you ask for.

CHAINS' GROSS PROFITS 26.7 PCT. OF SALES

Trade Commission Sends Senate Figures Based on Five-Year Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The Federal Trade Commission has sent to the Senate an incomplete report on its chain store inquiry. It showed that a representative group of stores covering periods ranging from 11 to 22 years ending in 1930, had net retail sales aggregating $38,757,966,881 on which the gross profit was $9,828,381,440 or 26.7 per cent.

Both the utilities and chain store investigations were begun five years ago at the direction of the Senate. While efforts are being made to complete the report of this fiscal year, next June 30, it was said that a great deal of valuable work would be left over which could be taken up later.

In its report, the commission said confectionery chains showed the highest gross margin of profit—49.3 per cent—while combination grocery and meat chains showed the lowest with 19.3 per cent. "Drug chains," it added, "average from 30 to 40 per cent gross profit, as do department stores, dollar-limit variety, and most of the clothing and shoe chains. Among the groups with gross profit average between 20 and 30 per cent are dry goods, dry goods and apparel, general merchandise, meat, tobacco, hardware, five dollar and unlimited price variety and men's shoes."

SIX MORE CANDIDATES FILE FOR ALDERMAN

Aspirants Now Total 46, With Democrats Leading Republicans With 36.

Six candidates for nominations for Aldermen—two Democrats and four Republicans—filed with the Election Board yesterday. This brings the number of aldermanic candidates who have filed to 46, including 10 Republicans and 36 Democrats. A number of others have announced candidacies but have not filed yet.

Terms of the 14 Aldermen from the odd-numbered wards are expiring. The incumbents are all Republicans, and all but one of them are seeking re-election. Frequently in the past the Democrats have had to draft aldermanic candidates to fill the ticket but there is much competition in this party now because of the feeling that it may, win the election. Some of the incumbents may have no opposition for renomination.

Those who filed yesterday are: Thomas S. Watts, incumbent, oil salesman, Melbourne Hotel, Republican, Seventeenth Ward; Harold P. Wiese, who resigned Tuesday as an auditor in the Federal income tax office, 4256 Washington boulevard, Republican, Twenty-third; Clarence C. Kaufmann, lawyer, incumbent, 5041 Waterman boulevard, Republican, Twenty-fifth; Adolph J. C. Feinberg, real estate dealer, 3016A Belt avenue, Republican, Twenty-seventh; C. George Saenger, brick-laying contractor, 3640A Minnesota avenue, Democrat, Eleventh; James L. Meagher, salesman, 2426 Coleman street, Democrat, Nineteenth.

Wiese, who has been endorsed by the Twenty-third Ward Independent Republican Club, has proposed that buildings erected during the next three years be exempted entirely or partly from property taxes for three years after erection as a stimulus to construction.

Candidacy of Hubert A. Hoeflinger for the Democratic nomination for Seventeenth Ward Alderman has been announced. He is supported by Dewey S. Godfrey, ward committeeman and chairman of the Democratic City Committee, and is likely to be backed by most of the committee members. Hoeflinger is secretary-treasurer of the Standard Clothing & Tailoring Co. and resides at 3979 Gratiot street. He is 50 years old, married, has nine children, and has lived in the ward 25 years.

John A. Genteman, Democratic Committeeman from the First Ward, was endorsed for the party nomination for Alderman from that ward by the ward organization, meeting last night at Prairie and West Florissant avenues. Genteman, an undertaker, resides at 5077 Durant avenue. Genteman told the organization that 17 men desired to run for Alderman in this ward, including about six members of the organization. To avoid such a contest, the organization drafted Genteman, he said today. It also endorsed Bernard P. Dickmann for the party nomination for Mayor and elected Frank X. Keller, chief clerk in the Circuit Attorney's office, as its president.

The Twenty-seventh Ward Republican League Club, meeting at Alcott and Lillian avenues last night, approved the recommendation of its executive board to back its president, Arthur R. Brunk, for Alderman from the ward. The club, adhering to the Republican City Committee members from the ward, is antagonistic to Alderman Sam Wimer, candidate for re-election. Brunk charges that Wimer only maintains a voting residence in the ward and actually lives in University City. For several years Wimer has denied this charge.

Dickmann, who is president of the Real Estate Exchange, last night approved the suggestion made Tuesday by one of his leading supporters, William L. Igoe, that Walter J. G. Neun, candidate for the Republican nomination for Mayor, should resign as president of the Board of Aldermen. Neun said yesterday he would not resign unless elected Mayor, and declared Dickmann was using Real Estate Exchange activities for political purposes.

Speaking at a Twenty-first Ward meeting at the Fairgrounds Hotel, Dickmann recalled that he had offered his resignation as head of the exchange recently but that it had been refused. Dickmann added that he had submitted his resignation as treasurer of the Democratic State Committee. He concluded: "I am not apologizing for what I go said; I think he spoke as a public-spirited citizen."

The Seventh Ward Democratic organization, meeting last night at 1731 Chouteau avenue, endorsed Dickmann's candidacy.

The Twenty-first Ward Civic Republican Club, meeting last night at 4212W Ashland avenue, endorsed Neun's candidacy.

Candidacy of Jerome F. Duggan for the Democratic nomination for Mayor was endorsed last night at a meeting of about 200 Twenty-third Ward Democrats at 4259 Olive street, and by groups of Duggan supporters from the Second, Eighth and Twelfth wards, meeting at the Warwick Hotel. Duggan addressed a group of union labor leaders last night at Unity Hall.

RELIEF INQUIRY IN ARGENTINA AS 35,000 FARMERS STRIKE
Program for Aid of the Provinces Being Worked Out by the Government.
By the Associated Press
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Feb. 2.—Coincident with the beginning of a strike in which 35,000 to 50,000 farmers have pledged themselves not to plant crops during the coming season unless their grievances have been removed, the Government acted yesterday to assist strikers in Santa Fe and Cordoba provinces, where the strike is widespread, as well as in Entre Rios which already had been promised relief needed as the result of drought. The Minister of Agriculture, Dr. Jose de Urquiza, announced that the Government would advance the necessary funds to the strikers to enable them to plant crops during the coming season.

CUBAN MONEY ORDER
SWINDLE WELL TIMED

Started After Annual Adjustment Between Countries and Might Have Gone on for Years.

The plot to circulate thousands of dollars in bogus Cuban postal money orders through this country, uncovered by postoffice inspectors last week here and in Chicago, apparently was to have been carried on throughout this year, postal authorities here said today.
This conclusion is based on the fact that the first of the orders, made out for $100 each, was cashed in this country after the first of the year. Adjustments of money-order accounts between Cuba and the United States are made at the close of each calendar year, and the existence of fraud could only be discovered by the exercise of vigilance in scrutinizing orders in the meantime, it was stated.
Two men, arrested in a North Grand boulevard rooming house last week, are held for removal to Chicago on warrants charging circulation of eleven of the money orders there.
The prisoners, who said they were John A. Gordon of Minneapolis and Emanuel Benemelis of Havana, were before Commissioner Burke for hearing yesterday on their removal to Chicago. They obtained a continuance to March 7. Gordon was released on $5000 bond. Benemelis is held in jail.
Another man is held at Richmond, Va., where Postoffice Inspectors report he has admitted cashing four of the money orders for $100 each.
The counterfeit character of the orders was first noticed in Chicago where 11 of them were cashed by a gambler for a total of $1100 before their character was discovered. Twenty-one more, submitted later for payment, were impounded.
The orders are excellent counterfeits, inspectors say. Their only divergence from the real forms is a slight dullness in the vermilion ink used to mark in the name of the postoffice from which they were issued. Bogus notifications of issuance of the orders have been widely circulated to United States postoffices in various parts of the country in apparent preparation for cashing them through the year.

PLACED IN RECEIVERSHIP
Note Holders Allege Interest Is in Default and Taxes for Four Years Are Unpaid.
Ben Phillips, an attorney, was appointed temporary receiver of the Kings-Vern Apartment Building, Kingshighway and Vernon avenues, by Circuit Judge Calhoun yesterday. The action was taken on petition of Mrs. George Wilson, William R. Davis and Rudolph L. Schaefer, who own $17,000 in notes on which they alleged interest due yesterday was in default. In addition, they alleged $11,332 in taxes for four years had not been paid and there was danger of a foreclosure sale. The notes are part of an issue of $140,000 executed Aug. 1, 1927, by the Kings-Vern Investment Co., of which $126,000 is outstanding, secured by a deed of trust against the property.
Jesse W. Barrett and Ellison A. Poulton, attorneys for the creditors, told the Court that if the building were sold at this time the amount realized would be substantially less than the property was worth. David P. Lichtenstein, successor trustee under the deed of trust, who was appointed Tuesday in place of the Savings Trust Co. of St. Louis, is named as a co-defendant. The petitioners state that the Kings-Vern Co. conveyed the property to David Graham in November, 1929. Graham also is included as a defendant.

She declared in her letter that a meeting scheduled for Dec. 6 was prevented by Franklin County deputies and United Mine Workers officials, but expressed confidence that the right of peaceful assembly would be granted in the case of the meeting Sunday.
Mrs. Wieck led a march of women to Springfield last week to appeal for preservation of constitutional rights, defeat of the proposed State sales tax and enactment of unemployment insurance measures.

By the Associated Press.
SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 2.—A floating reef of Glauber's salt, a mineral used in medicine and the arts, has been discovered in Great Salt Lake.
Sea scout officers said they found the reef, more than a mile long and 10 to 15 feet wide, when they went to inspect their boats on the lake. It is two or three feet thick and sufficiently dense to bear a person's weight. The reef was explained by the presence of the salts in the water more than sufficient to constitute a saturated solution. Its formation was said to be accelerated by the coldness of the water, which is more than 20 per cent salt and does not freeze.

RENEW FIGHT FOR 42 PCT. INTEREST

McCawley Bill to Increase Rate Approved by House Committee at Jefferson City Hearing.

WOULD PERMIT SALARY BUYING

Indications of Effort to Get Measure Through Without Attracting More Attention Than Necessary.

By CURTIS A. BETTS, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The 42 per cent interest small loan companies made a start last night toward getting back their old interest rate, which was reduced to 30 per cent by the Legislature four years ago after a long fight in which there were several legislative scandals.

The House Committee on Criminal Justice voted last night to report favorably the bill introduced by Representative McCawley and advocated by the small loan group to permit an interest rate of 42 per cent on the first $100 of a loan and on loans of less than $100.

The bill also would permit the borrower to give an assignment of his future wages as security for the loan, but not more than 10 per cent of the wages could be taken by the lender on any one pay day. An amendment enacted in 1929 prohibited assignment of unearned wages.

Action of the House Committee gave indications of an effort to get the bill through the Legislature without attracting more attention than was absolutely necessary. No public notice had been given of the hearing on the measure when the committee met in the afternoon.

Representative McCawley was on hand with an employee of the Kansas City Better Business Bureau to advocate the measure. The opposition was unrepresented formally, but Charles M. Hay, who had an active part in aiding in the interest reduction legislation four years ago, happened to be at the meeting to represent clients on another matter. He spoke briefly in favor of holding the rate at 30 per cent.

The small loan companies, which advertise extensively for business at the 30 per cent rate, using newspapers, the radio and direct mail appeal, take the position that they lose money on loans of less than $100 and that the higher interest rate is necessary if they are to continue in business.

The law was originally passed with the rate at 3 1/2 per cent a month, or 42 per cent a year. Four years ago bills were introduced to repeal the law and to reduce the interest rate to as low as 12 per cent.

The fight of the companies centered in the Senate, where the bills were held in the Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence. Senator Russell L. Deamont became interested toward the end of the session and finally succeeded in getting them out on to the floor, where he succeeded in passing a bill reducing the interest rate from 42 per cent to 30 per cent. The companies have been operating under that law for four years.

If the present bill is passed the rate will be restored to 42 per cent on loans of less than $100 and will remain at 30 per cent on loans from $100 to $300, which is the maximum amount that can be lent at more than the regular 8 per cent rate without violation of the usury statute.

In opposing the bill before the committee, Hay said that, although the proposed law prohibited splitting of loans in order to charge the 42 per cent rate on an amount in excess of $100, it would be a provision easy of evasion.

DETAILS OF CHARGES AGAINST GOV. ROLPH IN RECALL MOVE

Waste, Tax Discrimination, Incompetence and Frivolity Among the Charges.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 2.—The California State Grange yesterday formally began a movement for the recall of Gov. James Rolph. George H. Selheimer, master of the State Grange, announced he had ordered printed 20,000 copies of the recall petition. He said these would be circulated immediately.

The petition specifically charges Rolph with dissipating a $31,000,000 surplus and creating a $9,000,000 deficit since his election slightly more than two years ago; with using the power to discourage and prevent equalization of the tax burden between public utilities and property owners, with holding in leadership in "time of need," with "gross" abuse of public service; with incompetence, particularly in the Department of Agriculture, and with negligence in frivolous pastimes and meaningless activities.

Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The 42 per cent interest small loan companies made a start last night toward getting back their interest rate, which was reduced to 30 per cent by the Legislature four years ago after a long fight in which there were several legislative scandals.

The House Committee on Criminal Justice voted last night to report favorably the bill introduced by Representative McCawley and advocated by the small loan group, to permit an interest rate of 42 per cent on the first $100 of a loan and on loans of less than $100.

The bill also would permit the borrower to give an assignment of his future wages as security for the loan, but not more than 10 per cent of the wages could be taken by the lender on any one pay day. An amendment enacted in 1929 prohibited assignment of unearned wages.

Action of the House Committee gave indications of an effort to get the bill through the Legislature without attracting more attention than was absolutely necessary. No public notice had been given of a hearing on the measure when the committee met in the afternoon. Representative McCawley was on hand with an employee of the Kansas City Better Business Bureau to advocate the measure. The opposition was unrepresented formally, but Charles M. Hay, who had an active part in aiding in the interest reduction legislation four years ago, happened to be at the meeting to represent clients on another matter. He spoke briefly in favor of holding the rate at 30 per cent.

The small loan companies, which advertise extensively for business at the 30 per cent rate, using newspapers, the radio and direct mail appeal, take the position that they lose money on loans of less than $100 and that the higher interest rate is necessary if they are to continue in business.

The law was originally passed with the rate at 3½ per cent a month, or 42 per cent a year. Four years ago bills were introduced to repeal the law and to reduce the interest rate to as low as 12 per cent.

The fight of the companies centered in the Senate, where the bills were held in the Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence. Senator Russell L. Dearmont became interested toward the end of the session and finally succeeded in getting them out on to the floor, where he succeeded in passing a bill reducing the interest rate from 42 per cent to 30 per cent. The companies have been operating under that law for four years.

If the present bill is passed the rate will be restored to 42 per cent on loans of less than $100 and will remain at 30 per cent on loans from $200 to $300, which is the maximum amount that can be lent at more than the regular 8 per cent rate without violation of the usury statute.

In opposing the bill before the committee, Hay said that, although the proposed law prohibited splitting of loans in order to charge the 42 per cent rate on an amount in excess of $100, it would be a provision easy of evasion.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 2.—The California State Grange yesterday formally began a movement for the recall of Gov. James Rolph Jr. George H. Sehlmeier, master of the State Grange, announced he had ordered printed 20,000 copies of the recall petition. He said these would be circulated immediately.
The petition specifically charges Rolph with dissipating a $31,000,000 surplus and creating a $9,000,000 deficit since his election slightly more than two years ago; with using the power to discourage and prevent equalization of the tax burden between public utilities and common property owners, with failing in leadership in "time of more need," with "gross" abuse of service; with incompetence, particularly in the Department of Finance and Agriculture, and with indulgence in frivolous pastimes and meaningless activities.

MONEY LENDERS RENEW FIGHT FOR 42 PCT. INTEREST

McCawley Bill to Increase Rate Approved by House Committee at Jefferson City Hearing.

HITLER OFFERS TWO 4-YEAR PLANS IN AID OF GERMANY

After Dissolution of Reichstag, Chancellor Proposes, but Does Not Detail, Schemes to Help Farmer and Worker.

GIVE US FOUR YEARS' TRIAL, HE URGES

Declares Other Side Has Done Nothing in Fourteen Years—Opposition Says He Is 'Using Catchword Borrowed From Stalin.'

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Feb. 2.—After President von Hindenburg had dissolved the Reichstag, Adolf Hitler, the new Chancellor of the Reich, issued a proclamation to the German people last night in which he announced his Government would put through two four-year plans "to effect the salvation of farmers and workers. Compulsory labor service and the establishment of farm colonies, the Chancellor said, were "the main pillars" of his program for the reconstruction of the Fatherland.

Hitler Addresses Reichstag.
Hitler, accompanied by Wilhelm Frick, his Minister of the Interior, appeared today before the Reichstag, upper house of Parliament, to address the members and spoke from the presidential dais. "It required great faith in our nation for me to take over the leadership in this grave time," he told them, "but I face the future with great hope. "I am strengthened and you must be strengthened by three great characteristics of our people: industriousness, our capacity and genius which has carried us through difficult times, and by the fact that, despite all adversities, we will have our own German soil. "If past generations drew strength from that soil to constitute this great nation, we can do likewise."

Hitler, in a conference with newspaper men, challenged his countrymen to "crucify me or do anything else to me if at the end of four years we have not succeeded."

"The other side had things all their own way for 14 years," he said in his first press conference as Chancellor. "Look at the result!"

"Give us four years—that's the legal period of a Reichstag—and let the country sit in judgment."

One of his audience interrupted with a request for an explanation of the four-year plan he mentioned last night.

"I'm glad you asked me that," said Hitler. "If I had wanted to make a campaign speech last night I could have promised that by the middle of March unemployment would have been wiped out and by May the farmer would have been back on his feet."

"But you didn't hear me do that. I'm more honest than most of my opponents. I wouldn't make such promises."

Democrats Confident of Controlling City Hall; Republicans Gloomy But Think They'll Squeeze Through

Party Leaders Sum Up Their Chances in Mayoralty Campaign—Summary of the Issues.

More interest is being evinced among Democrats in the municipal campaign than there has been since that party controlled the city government a quarter of a century ago. Democrats, from the big leaders down to the block workers, think they are about to capture City Hall. The Mayor, the Comptroller and the 14 Aldermen from odd-numbered wards are to be elected. Should the Democratic aldermanic slate be successful, the party would control the Board of 28 Aldermen, and it placed two members there in the November landslide. The primary will be March 10—five weeks hence—and the election April 4.

Neun and Dickmann.
Walter J. G. Neun, Republican, now president of the Board of Aldermen, and Bernard F. Dickmann, Democrat, president of the Real Estate Exchange, seem to be in the lead for nominations for Mayor.

Dickmann said today: "Things look very favorable for a Democratic victory. I think there is a fighting chance to change the administration. I intend to conduct a dignified campaign and stay out of personalities, but I approve the suggestion that has been made that Neun should resign as aldermanic president. If Neun is elected Mayor, I will be his successor as president and if defeated his presence would make it difficult to work harmoniously for economy."

Neun, who will not resign, said: "My chances for nomination and election are all I am confident the people have confidence in me. The Democrats have a very good chance this time, because of circumstances, but I think there is nothing to alarm the Republicans, especially with two good men like Neun and Comptroller Nolte. I think the people will find we made very good records in our office."

What Rival Chairmen Say.
Chairman Godfrey of the Democratic City Committee said: "I am enthusiastic about Democratic prospects—more so than ever before. We have had a remarkably large attendance at our meetings. There is a general sentiment for change of administration."

Chairman Gruner of the Republican City Committee said: "We are going to make a thorough fight—the usual good, stiff Republican fight. It started long ago to organize and we have regular precinct meetings the year around. People who voted the Democratic ticket for beer in November are coming back to our party. They are disgruntled with the action of Congress on the liquor question. If the Democrats in Congress had voted according to their platform pledge, we would have had repeal of the eighteenth amendment, as has the House in concerned."

In my ward, the Twenty-fifth, a canvass reaching fully half the voters shows a sentiment of 10 to 1 for Neun over Dickmann; even Democrats there are voting for Neun.

"This city has been the best governed in the country. Its credit is of the best. Its bonds bring a premium. Except for one or two little things in the 1923 bond issue, bond funds have been administered well. The street widening program came with the depression on, which has been deleterious for the people, but that has been rectified and there will be no more such expenditures during the depression."

Record of Previous Elections.
In the eight previous mayoralty elections in this century, the Republicans have been successful the last six times and the Democrats the first two. The average Republican plurality has been $519, or, omitting one instance of unusually large majority, 6751. A condensed record of the election results follows:

1929—Victor J. Miller (Rep.), 108,909; Lawrence McDaniel (Dem.), 101,582; Miller's majority, 7114.
1925—Miller (Rep.), 120,852; William L. Igoe (Dem.), 117,223; Miller's majority, 3129.
1921—Henry W. Kiel (Rep.), 104,389; James W. Byrnes (Dem.), 94,784; Kiel's majority, 9615.
1917—Kiel (Rep.), 70,215; William Connell (Dem.), 48,854; Kiel's majority, 23,361.
1913 (first city election under the primary system)—Kiel (Rep.), 67,119; Dr. John H. Simon (Dem.), 54,819; Frank H. Gerhart (Progressive), 4522; Joseph J. Hauser (Socialist), 6178; Kiel's plurality, 2200.

SWEEPING INQUIRY INTO STATE ROAD CONTRACTS VOTED

Donnelly Heads Senate Committee to Investigate Highway Department for Last Five Years.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 2.—The State Senate today without a dissenting vote, appointed a committee to conduct a broad investigation of all contracts entered into by the State Highway Department during the last five years. Under the resolution it will be possible for the committee to go into any activity of the department during that period.

Senator Kinney, President pro tem, appointed Senator Donnelly, majority floor leader of the Senate, to the chairmanship of the committee. Donnelly was the author of the resolution. The other members are Senators Casey of Kansas City and Henry of Butler, Democrats, and Terry of Festus and Kelley of Pineville, Republicans.

No serious opposition was offered from the floor when Donnelly offered his resolution. Senator Joffe of Kansas City sought to delay action on it until tomorrow, and questioned the advisability of incurring the expense the inquiry will entail, but, failing to obtain support from any other Senator, he finally announced his intention to support the resolution.

Will Not Delay Work.
Senator Donnelly, explaining the purpose of the resolution, said there was nothing about it which would interfere with construction work of the department, and that it would not delay road building.

"Many reports of irregularities in the making of contracts for supplies, as well as reports of other undesirable practices which do not appear to be in the best interests of the State, have reached me," Senator Donnelly said. "I have looked into them as well as possible and I am convinced that the results of this inquiry will show that it is fully justified."

"The people are vitally interested in their road building program. They are interested in getting value for their money invested in the roads. When any question arises as to whether there has been gross extravagance, whether money is being wasted, whether State funds are being illegally expended, then they have the right to know the facts."

"Expense Will Be Justified."
"The Legislature has the right to know the facts and it is the duty of the Legislature to ascertain the facts that it may take such steps as are necessary to correct evils which arise."

"The people have the right to insist that graft, if there is graft, shall be eliminated, and it is our duty to see that it is."

"The Attorney-General has been called in to assist in this inquiry. It will be conducted thoroughly, fairly, expeditiously economically. I am convinced from my own inquiries that the expense will be justified by the facts that will be produced."

Senator Donnelly based his demand for an investigation on the ground that it had been "openly charged" that there were many irregularities in the affairs of the department.

Open Charges Specified.
The "open charges" to which he specifically referred in the preamble of the resolution were: That contracts had been made for the purchase of cement, gravel, sand, rock and other materials which were not favorable to the State.

ASSAULTS BASING TARIFF ON THE GOLD STANDARD

Commission Head Calls G.O.P. Plan Embargo; Cites Mills' View.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—In a vigorous assault upon Republican plans for boosting tariffs automatically against depreciated currency countries, Robert L. O'Brien, Tariff Commission chairman, told House committee today that "if you want an embargo go ahead and pass it, but let us do it honestly and intelligently."

Speaking rapidly, he recommended to the Republicans who have forced a House vote Feb. 13 on this issue, that they "accept the leadership of Secretary Mills, whose latest speech on the gold standard clearly indicates his opposition."

"In his plans for recovery," O'Brien said, "I do not see our great Finance Minister advocating this plan."

What Vote Means.
"Everyone who votes Feb. 13 for the Crowther bill is expressing a belief that countries off the gold standard are better off economically," the tariff chairman continued.

"If representatives vote that way the only logical deduction is that representatives should vote to take this country off the gold standard." He contended the bill should be compared to the "medical clinic where temperatures of patients are reduced by changing the gradation in the clinical thermometer."

Though the hearings were before a sub-committee, almost all the 25 members of the full Ways and Means Committee were present to hear O'Brien.

Representative Rainey, the Democratic leader, who announced a party caucus to block the bill but later changed his plans, was on hand. O'Brien said much could be said for an increase in the tariff "but not this way."

"The Paramount Calamity."
"Partly illusory" was the way O'Brien described the belief that going off the gold standard would help domestic economic conditions.

"There is no escape from the conclusion that if a country is better off when it goes off gold, then this country should go off," he said.

"I believe our going off the gold standard would be the paramount calamity of this disturbing period. "Our imports today are at a very low ebb. There is a heavy balance of trade in our favor. We are not being flooded by imports."

Argentina, which proposed the pact, already had Brazil's agreement to the plan when the conference opened here yesterday between Chancellors Saavedra Lamas and Miguel Cruchaga of Argentina and Chile, respectively.

Chancellor Cruchaga agreed to a plan to send a Chilean representative to Buenos Aires to sign the peace pact, intended as a supplementary document to the Kellogg-Briand pact, at the same time that Brazil sends an envoy.

BORAH DEMANDS COMPENSATIONS IN DEBT ADJUSTMENT

Other Economic Problems Must Be Considered or Parley Should Be Called Off, He Says.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The disposition in many quarters today is to regard Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain's "no swapping" war debts statements as the views of one Cabinet member and not definitely indicative of the final position the British Government will assume in the forthcoming discussions.

Chamberlain told American correspondents in London yesterday that Britain does not regard the debts talks in March as a "great swapping deal." He said the "conception of concessions by Great Britain for the scaling down of war debts is not a British conception."

Not long afterward Senate leaders here gave plain warning that the British cannot expect debt adjustments without giving compensations. In a formal statement, Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that if Britain will not consider other world problems in connection with debts, "we have no alternative but to stand by the debt settlement heretofore made."

"If the British come to the conference in that frame of mind," Senator Reed, Pennsylvania Republican and Hoover administration spokesman, said, "I see no possibility of any conclusion being reached that is acceptable to both nations."

Senator Watson, Republican leader, said that, without concessions, there could be "neither cancellation, revision nor postponement."

And from Senator Walsh, Montana Democrat, and generally considered a probable member of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet, came the opinion: "Apparently the English representatives are coming over to persuade us that it would be in our best interest to cancel or reduce the debts. My own judgment is that we are quite competent ourselves to reach a just conclusion in that matter."

Comments on Cement Investigation.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
YOUR editorial, "Cement Prices in Missouri," was very true, but lacking in a final analysis of this perplexing situation.

Considering that 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 barrels of cement and $640,000 of the taxpayers' money are involved, a satisfactory solution is owing to the taxpayers, to avoid a recurrence of this unparalleled breach of good, honest competitive bidding. Nine uniform bids from different manufacturers challenges every taxpayer, particularly under present strained economic conditions, when the following circumstances are considered:

Government statistics do not quote a single other commodity with an increase of 30 per cent in price during the past year. I challenge any one of these nine manufacturers to prove he has increased his employees' salary 30 per cent or is paying 30 per cent more for raw materials. I also challenge any cement manufacturer to prove he has sufficient cause to justify his anticipation of a 30 per cent increase in production costs this year. Lastly, I challenge any efficiently operating cement manufacturer to prove he operated at a loss at last year's prices. I cannot challenge the proceedings of the "Trade Association," but, judging from the apparent fixed price of $1.25 per barrel, one can readily draw his own conclusions. Then the question presents itself: Why the 35 cents per barrel increase?

In examining the result of our past experience with investigations and long-drawn-out, costly litigation, we find that one cement manufacturer was fined some $20,000. However, we will have to credit these investigations, etc., with zero, because the taxpayers are again paying an excessive $640,000 to these same manufacturers this year.

How can this sort of thing be stopped, and how can the taxpayers be assured of a minimum, consistent price for cement? The writer is not in possession of a magic wand, but with his experiences, coupled with the backing of a reputable engineering firm, he does not claim to a remedy which will settle this costly experience. Yes, not only for the next few years, but permanently, and without one cent of cost to the taxpayers.

Here is how: The sum of $640,000 will construct and completely equip a cement plant of sufficient capacity to meet our requirements for years to come. Politics can hardly enter into this undertaking, because one manager with two or three subordinates are the only fair-salaried positions, the balance being common labor. Not only will we then have uniform price, but lower prices, resulting in a saving of approximately $750,000 a year at present price rates.

If our duly elected representatives in Jefferson City possess sufficient initiative, are resourceful enough, and have the courage to retaliate, because they certainly have been challenged, then in order to do justice to the taxpayers, they should appropriate a like $640,000 for the construction of a cement plant, and thereby administer a coup de grace to this $640,000 playhouse of these cement manufacturers.

AN ARMISTICE IN TRANSPORTATION.

The war between the railroads and the highways is in negotiation. It might be too much to say that peace has spread its wings, but an armistice has been arranged which points to a better equity among carriers.

This armistice appears in the form of a report by a joint committee of railroad executives and highway interests which has been at work for three months. The report is signed by Gen. W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad, as chairman of the rail executives, and by Alfred H. Swayze of General Motors, as chairman of the highway users. It may be accepted, therefore, as an authoritative pact.

It is an instrument of great public importance. Those antagonistic transportation agencies found at the conference table that their points of agreement were many, their differences few. The fine spirit actuating both is reflected in their "Declaration of Policy," the first principle of which is the public interest. They assert that "the public's right to the selection of the agency of transportation which it wants and which it finds most useful must be respected."

From that correct fundamental, the report recounts the consideration of details, with surprisingly constructive results. It is agreed that commercial users of the highways—the common carriers—should be subjected to regulation, meaning that permits, financial responsibility, drivers' hours of service, filing of rates, must all be required—a contention long urged by the railroads.

This agreement, however, does not include trucks. The highway users insist that regulation of trucks, because of the character of the business as now operated, should be instituted "if and when data have been collected to indicate the desirability of such regulation in the public interest." It is agreed that security issues by highway transportation concerns should be regulated; that the railroads may operate motor vehicles on the highways on the same terms as other commercial users; that in the matter of grade crossing elimination, laws requiring the railroads to make excessive expenditures should be repealed; that the railroads' share of the expense be measured by the tangible savings resulting; that the cost should be determined jointly by the Public Service Commission and the Highway Commission. The governing idea, apparently, is that grade-crossing elimination is primarily a public improvement and a public obligation.

As to taxation, it is agreed that motor vehicles should pay the entire cost of the State highway system and that "there should be no diversion of such taxes in any degree to any other purpose."

Take the truck out of the equation—its weight, length and rates of service—and the railroads and highways have little, if anything, to argue about. This difference, to be sure, may not be lightly dismissed, for among the highway fauna, so to speak, the truck is the railroads' bete noir. But even here, the highway users issue no ultimatum. They are on record, as already noted, to consider truck regulation when convinced by the evidence.

The value of this report is found in the community of interest between the railroads and the highways. The foundation has been laid, we believe, for a national transportation policy and the prophecy spoken of that unified national transportation system for which industrial and social necessity is calling.

BRAVO FOR WILHELM.

We pause to throw a bravo to Wilhelm von Hohenzollern. They say he is elated at the spectacle of Hitler in the official shoes once worn by Bismarck, and it is an extraordinary exhibit, perpetrated by history in one of her ironic moods. And looking at the wooded solitude of Doorn, he is seeing, they say, the glory that was Potsdam, the tumultuous adulation that was Berlin. All that is speculation, however plausible, however logical. But getting into the concrete, the ex-Kaiser is said to have bought four automobiles recently, and there is a fact, if fact it is, one can sink one's teeth into. There's an example worthy of emulation. If everyone, who can afford to do it, would buy four automobiles, this depression would be bound, gagged and cast into the bottomless pit, where we want to see it. Wherefore, the bravo.

AS TO ELECTION BOARD APPOINTMENTS.

We trust Gov. Park, in making selections for the Election Board, avoids the mistake of naming men like Nick Polito, Fourth Ward Republican committeeman, who is being mentioned in some quarters as a possible choice. Polito is a typical ward politician and petty jobholder, whose activities for many years have revolved around the machinery of vote-getting, rather than in the larger arena of public affairs. His ward, whose Democratic political boss is Jimmie Miller, is notorious as a place where machine sales fare remarkably well. In the Fourth Ward, for example, Gov. Park actually ran 600 votes ahead of Mr. Roosevelt, a condition unduplicated elsewhere in the city.

Last summer, following the primary, we had occasion to congratulate Boss Miller on the consummate artistry with which the Democratic machine sales was put over in the Fourth Ward. Nothing is so eloquent as the figures. In the Thirteenth Precinct, the machine candidates, Howell and Wilson, each polled 223 votes. Dearmont, Wilson's opponent, got 23 votes; Byrnes, Clark and Hay, Howell's opponents, got 2, 18 and 4 votes respectively. In the Ninth Precinct, Wilson polled 201 votes and Howell 190; Dearmont got 7, Byrnes, Clark and Hay got 5, 5 and 2, respectively. In the Third Precinct the count was: Wilson, 341; Howell, 340; Dearmont, 6; Clark, 7; Hay and Byrnes, none. But Miller's masterpiece was the Fifth Precinct, where Howell and Wilson each got 63 and their opponents failed to get a single vote.

Now, it is the duty of the Election Board at times to inquire into such conditions as exist in the Fourth Ward, where the startled beholder of election results must conclude either that the voters are astonishingly like-minded in their choice of candidates or that they are being subjected to a herding process, hardly in keeping with notions of democracy. Clearly, the persons who sit on the board should be sufficiently removed from ward bossism to take a detached viewpoint toward it. Whatever may be said for Mr. Polito, it would be difficult for him to sit in judgment on a type of activity in which he himself has been engaged for 20 years or more; that is, the business of putting over machine candidates.

St. Louis has been relatively free from election scandals, but the condition is not an accidental one. It requires constant vigilance and the right sort of Election Board members. If the new Democratic Governor, by careless or unwise appointments, destroys the effectiveness of the Election Board, retribution against his party at the polls will be swift and sure.

A ROAD TO MUNICIPAL ECONOMY.

A sheet of bills designed to effect municipal economies by structural changes in city offices controlled by State law has been presented to St. Louis Senators by Carter Atkins, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research. The bills are the outgrowth of a study made by the St. Louis Committee on Taxation and Governmental Reform, of which Mr. Atkins is chairman.

As the Post-Dispatch pointed out a few weeks ago, the necessities of our present municipal government prevent sweeping economies without imperiling necessary services. By breaking down city expenditures into their component parts, it was shown that the field for economy is restricted to a very narrow range. This is bad news for taxpayers, who are laboring under a tax load that is unbearable.

Mr. Atkins' committee, however, seeking to pierce the stone wall the tax-payers have set up, came to the conclusion that large economies are possible if structural changes are made by the Legislature. For example, certain city departments, with duplicating activities, can be merged at a great saving in expenses. Certain fee offices, now under elected officials, like City Collector, Public Administrator and City Treasurer, can be made appointive. The fee system itself, which lends itself to waste, extravagance and other abuses, should be abolished entirely. Fiscal affairs of the city should be unified.

These and other suggestions of the committee possess the virtue, not only of economy measures, but of improving and modernizing a city government sorely in need of overhauling. Since the bills encroach on old political practices and interfere with certain vested political interests, they already have aroused opposition. It was inevitable that they would. However, the politicians are going to learn before very long, as some of them already have learned, that governmental reform of this character is imperative.

Mr. Atkins' bills deserve the careful scrutiny and consideration of the Legislature. They represent a road—possibly the only feasible road—to a reduction in the St. Louis tax burden.

WHY NOT IN ST. LOUIS?

The great peace pageant in music which has long been the dream of Walter Damrosch, and which was given with great success in Madison Square Garden last week for the benefit of the unemployed, should be brought to St. Louis and given at the Municipal Theater for the benefit of the unemployed here.

Assisted by Joseph Urban, stage designer, and Thomas Wood Stevens, in charge of the pageant, Mr. Damrosch produced the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven in the way the composer intended that it should be given, that is with a great chorus and the participation of all nations in their respective costumes.

The Municipal Theater is admirably adapted for such a spectacle, and there will be an opportunity in late spring when it could be given in advance of the regular opera season. We have the chorus and the orchestra. A local production of the music pageant could be given with little else from New York than Messrs. Damrosch and Urban. Mr. Stevens, fortunately, is already here. So unusual a production, and one of such artistic importance, could easily draw audiences from St. Louis and all the region around us.

ADVANCE OF A WORTHY CAUSE.

A notable step in American social progress was taken when the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee reported out the bill to legalize the dissemination of birth control information. This means that for the first time the measure will go before the entire Judiciary Committee for action. It is to be hoped the committee will send the bill to the Senate with a favorable vote.

All that is sought by the advocates of the bill is to bring the Federal law into harmony with practice. Sixty years ago, birth control was classed with obscenity. Today, it is a matter of public health, yet the Federal stigma still attaches itself. So long as the Comstock law stands, there will be conflict with the realistic statutes of states which have seen fit to liberalize their restrictions. There is, for example, the case of the maternity clinic, authorized by the State in which it is located, nevertheless prevented from functioning to fullest advantage by the prohibition against the use of malls.

Senator Austin of Vermont, one of the members of the Judiciary Subcommittee, opposed the bill on the ground that the declining rate of growth of population already predicts a static if not a declining nation so far as population is concerned. This position needs to be considered in the light of the recent national convention of the American Birth Control League. At this meeting, it was made plain that the purpose is not to limit population, but to make available for the poorer elements, who most need it, information now widely employed by those who are better situated economically. As Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild of New York University put it, the goal is birth selection, not birth restriction.

In this connection, attention may well be called to the good cause of the recently established Maternal Health Center at 396A North Euclid avenue. Sponsored by a number of outstanding St. Louis physicians and churchmen, this clinic is providing birth control information to married women at moderate cost. Particularly in a time of widespread unemployment, it deserves financial support to keep it going.

A SETBACK TO LABOR LEGISLATION.

The depression has so lowered labor standards that 1933 finds the legislative gains of the past quarter century practically eliminated. Such is the sober judgment of Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard, as expressed at the Eastern conference on labor laws. It is not, he pointed out, a case of repeal or formal changes in these hard-won statutes, but an increasing tendency to ignore them. Governmental economies are being effected in many states by starving the agencies which are responsible for the enforcement of labor laws. Inadequate personnel causes neglect, and neglect amounts to tacit repeal. This means that in many industrial communities, statutes relating to hours of labor, sanitary and health conditions, child labor and related phases of social and labor betterment are going for naught. Moreover, unscrupulous employers are taking advantage of economic conditions, including unemployment, and are reestablishing sweatshop practices. Such a report is truly disheartening. Coming, as it does, from a highly competent authority on labor legislation, it makes a mockery of the talk about benefits of the depression.

THE CRISIS AT MEAL-TIME.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann

Technocracy: III. The Prophecy of Doom

WE COME now to a consideration of the reasons which the Technocrats offer for predicting the destruction of the existing order. Here, in their own authorized language, is the prophecy of doom:

"We now have the accelerating upward sweep of the energy curves and the curves of an enormous total production, and the accelerating decline of the curves of employment, involving millions of men, and still more violent fall of the curve of man-hours per unit produced—the sweep of all these curves across the charts dealing with unprecedented magnitudes and numbers constitutes unmistakable evidence that the whole system is due to go out of balance in a not-distant future." (Introduction to Technocracy, p. 36).

This, they tell us, is "the disaster that science and technology view as . . . unavoidable." The question is: How does Mr. Scott know it is unavoidable? He tells us that he knows it by looking at the sweep of curves across the charts! Yet it is only four years since economists and stock brokers, and a considerable number of persons who are now temporary Technocrats, were looking at the sweep of curves across the charts and predicting a New Era of ever-increasing prosperity. Is it possible that anyone is so simple-minded as to think that curves sweeping across charts "constitute unmistakable evidence" of what is due to happen in the not-distant future?

There is one curve sweeping across the chart which particularly impresses Mr. Scott. It is the curve of energy consumption. It is on this curve that he finds his system of prophecy rests. With this curve, he believes he can interpret the human past and predict the future. This is the crux of the Technocratic doctrine. It is because he confidently relies upon the prophetic power of this curve that he feels so cocksure that he knows how existing tendencies are unavoidably bound to develop.

His notion is that the "basic" relationships of society can be measured in terms of the conversion of energy, and that if you know how rapidly energy is converted, you know what is happening and what must happen. It is a stupendous claim. If it is well founded, Mr. Scott is the Isaac Newton and Albert Einstein of human society. There is some reason for supposing that he thinks he is.

If his claims are correct, he is able to do for social phenomena what the astronomers can, with their methods of measurement, do with the heavenly bodies. The astronomers are able to state, with reasonable accuracy, the position of the stars and planets at any date in the past or in the future. Mr. Scott thinks he can measure human activity so successfully that he can interpret the past 60 centuries and forecast the future.

This epoch-making formula is arrived at by measuring the energy contained in the food that is eaten, in the fuels that are consumed, and dividing the total by the population. Thus Mr. Scott finds that until about 1800 the maximum energy consumption in any society was about 2000 kilogram calories per capita per day; he finds, though he does not say so, that the energy consumption per capita today is 75 times as great, or 150,000 kilogram calories per day.

I shall assume that these figures are reasonably correct. There is nothing inherently improbable in the statement that the United States today consumes 75 times as much energy per capita as it did in 1800. There are moments, to be sure, when Mr. Scott feels very imaginative, and then he talks, not about a 75-fold increase in a century and a quarter, but an 8,750,000-fold acceleration since 1800. These figures he reaches by comparing the potential horsepower of the biggest turbine running 24 hours a day with the man-power of one human being doing a day's work. But I do not wish to dwell upon Mr. Scott's shenanigans. I stick to his sober estimate of a 75-fold increase in energy consumption in the last 130 years.

What needs to be inquired into is the assumption—which Mr. Scott calls "the basic postulate" of Technocracy—that in measuring energy consumed he has found the key to social evolution. Many men have been searching for that key. Let us look at Mr. Scott's. He tells us that until 1800 the maximum energy consumption was not more than 2000 kilogram calories per capita per day. Granted. What can Mr. Scott do with his key, now that he has found it?

Does it enable him to say why 2000 kilogram calories in Mesopotamia produced Babylon and why the same number of calories in Greece produced Athens? Does it explain why 2000 kilogram calories in Athens produced the splendor of the fifth century and the disintegration of the fourth century? Does it explain why the Roman Empire had peace and prosperity under the Antonines and misery and squalor in the time of Romulus Augustulus? Can Mr. Scott pretend to explain the rise and fall of states and of cultures, the periods of well-being and of suffering, the whole vast pageant of human life on this planet, by talking about 2000 kilogram calories? Well, how, if he cannot explain the past by his measurement of energy, does he dare to say he can predict the future?

His claim rests upon the fallacious premise that a social system is wholly determined by the quantity of energy it consumes. If Mr. Scott's assumption were true, the same number of calories consumed in shooting off a cannon and building houses would produce the same social results. If all the matters is quantity of energy, and not the use to which the energy is put, the same expenditure of energy should always produce the same effects. It does not.

The error in what Mr. Scott calls "the basic postulate" of Technocracy is the naive logical error of trying to measure a complex whole by measuring one of its parts. It is possible, for example, to weigh all the steel and wood used in building a ship. It may be desirable to do so. But the ship is something more than the weight of steel and wood which constitute it. It is an organization of steel and wood which, because it is an organization, can do things that the steel and wood as such cannot do.

So it is with a human being. It is possible to weigh the chemical matter of which he is composed. It is possible to measure the energy he consumes. But he is some-

If Hunger Wins

From the Pittsburgh Press.

ONE of the most devastating effects of the depression is the heritage of physical disability which it may leave this country. It may be true that cases of actual starvation are few, but tens of thousands of persons are half-starving, with their physical resistance being lowered day by day. This applies particularly to children. The annual report of the Kingsley Association emphasizes this factor. It quotes Dr. Thomas S. Arbutnot, supervising the association's Lillian Convalescent Rest, as follows:

"The outstanding fact in the history of the past year has been the reflection of hard times in the seriously under-nourished condition of patients admitted. It is one of the incidental but by no means minor responsibilities of such an institution, from the knowledge it possesses, to give warning of the consequences which result from health conditions under which many of our neighbors are living."

"The upon of stay required for the malnutrition cases has been considerably above the general average for all types of cases admitted. It is often two months, or even longer, before the looked-for gains in weight begin to manifest themselves. The most obvious: Society in the end must pay a high price for causing any number of its members to live on a diet without margin of safety."

Now, the depression is over, what kind of citizens will America have in those who have been jobless and penniless? Will their vitality be irreparably lowered by protracted under-nourishment? Will the children of today's unemployed, who will be the citizens of the future, be a footloose in their bodies when slow starvation lowered their resistance?

Those questions must be answered by the way in which the people of America fight back hunger from their fallow during what it is hoped will be the last winter of the depression.

thing more than the chemicals and the energy. He is a living organism. He can direct his energy. He can increase or reduce it in ways which no chemist and no physicist would pretend to be able to predict. He is, if I dare to use the language which Technocrats despise, a living soul. Now, a human society, being composed of millions of living souls, is the most complex of all phenomena which men attempt to study. That is why political science is, of all the sciences, the least exact, why it is the least able to employ mathematical analysis. To suppose that it is possible to select, from among all the variable elements which enter into social life, one element, such as energy consumption, and derive all the other elements from it, is not science. It is the mimicry of science. It is a perfect example of what Aldous Huxley, I believe, has called the Higher Unlearning.

So we are entitled to conclude, I think, without any fear that we are turning our backs upon another Galileo, another Newton or another Darwin, that Mr. Scott has not discovered what he pretends to have discovered; the scientific clue to social evolution. The delusion of grandeur which causes him to look upon himself as the inventor of a new era in human thought and to say that "all philosophic approaches to social phenomena, from Plato to and including—Marx, must functionally (sic) be avoided as intellectual expressions of dementia praecox" should not impress anyone. That is nothing but the pretentious ignorance of a crack.

The bridal party will descend the staircase and pass through an anteroom arranged from the hall through the dining room to a semicircular room at the east side of the house where an altar has been arranged with cydonium ferns covering the windows to the ceiling and a bust of Erasmus of Rotterdam in the center. The altar is a great bouquet of spring blossoms.

The bride will wear a gown of single silver holders decorated with vases of white lilies. Wrought iron gates which separate the sunroom from the dining room have been opened and festooned with asparagus ferns. The Rev. Dr. Van Lee Holt of St. John's Methodist Church will officiate.

Miss Emily Jane Magnus has been turned from Westover School, Connecticut, where she is a student, to be her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Christine Jones will be the bridesmaid. Three young relatives of the bride, Carlota Busch, daughter of August A. Busch, Patricia Flanagan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Flanagan of New York, and Paul Victor von Gontal of St. Louis, will be bridesmaids.

Among the bridesmaids will be a young bearer, and Philip Tiffany is Mr. Preece's best man. Pansy tones of violet and yellow have been accentuated in the costumes of the bride's attendants. Miss Magnus and Miss Jones are gowned alike in chaste, new silk net, embroidered in chenille, over matching tulle. The gowns are designed with extremely high neck lines in front and graduate into deep rounds at the back. The net is held at the shoulders with rhinestone clips. There are short full puffed sleeves, edged with short, crisp tulle. Their slippers match the gown. A new note in flower arrangement has been achieved in season of the bride, Carlota Busch, carry over their arms. Here, pansy tones have again been used in the flowers including blue iris, tall man roses, yellow freesia, tall purple lilies, and white lilies.

The bride will wear a gown of shimmering silver cloth woven to soft fine texture. It is designed after the empire period on simple lines, devoid of ornamentation, with deep square neckline and long sleeves pointed over the shoulders. The skirt sweeps into pointed silver train. The bride will wear the wedding veil of Mr. Flanagan, who is her aunt. It was made in France years ago, and an elaborate creation of silk and hand-made with row after row of ordered with a wide border of silk cloth and edged with wide white lace. It is to be worn over a separate layer of flesh tinted tulle, and held to her hair with a simple clip.

GERMANY REJECTS FRENCH PROPOSAL ON DISARMAMENT

Paris Had Suggested to Geneva Conference the Linking of Security Pact.

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, Feb. 2.—Count Rudolf Nodding, Germany's delegate to the world disarmament conference today rejected the French demand that disarmament must be linked with the creation of additional guarantees of security.

Chancellor Hitler's spokesman asserted that the League of Nations covenant pledged the nations to progressive disarmament as the best means of maintaining peace and guaranteeing the security of all states. Since that covenant was adopted, he said, many other bulwarks of security have been constructed.

He said this statement in an address before the conference which resumed this morning with a discussion of the French plan this week and then take up the British proposals.

The Italian delegate said that Europe must know where the United States and Great Britain stand before undertaking continental security pacts. Measures against war are ineffectual, he said, unless they include also guarantees against economic aggression.

MICHIGAN GOVERNOR SEEKS TO ABOLISH PROPERTY TAX

Legislative Program Proposes Combined Sales and Income Levy as Substitute.

By the Associated Press.
LANSING, Mich., Feb. 2.—Gov. William A. Comstock, heading Michigan's new Democratic State administration, today submitted to the Legislature a program proposing a combined sales and income tax to replace the State property tax.

He declared in his message that the new tax would be levied by the reduction in his total tax burden of approximately $65,000,000.

The general sales and income tax bills submitted included recommendations for a 3 per cent tax on all retail sales not including stocks and bonds, a 3-10 of 1 per cent tax on all manufactured articles, the value to be determined by the selling price, a 3-10 per cent tax on revenues of radio stations, books, newspapers and periodicals, a 3 per cent tax on the gross income of utilities, a similar tax on professional services, and amusement places. In each instance there would be an exemption of $400 a year, applicable alike to individuals and corporations.

Every firm and individual coming under the various classifications of taxpayers would pay an annual license fee of $1. Agriculture, insurance companies, building and loan companies and State and national banks would be exempt from the proposed levy.

EXCAVATION STARTED IN ROME TO UNEARTH TEMPLE OF VENUS

Traces of Building, Dedicated by Julius Caesar, Found a Year Ago.

ROME, Feb. 2.—Excavations to unearth the temple of Venus, dedicated by Julius Caesar in 46 B. C., have been started on Rome's new Street of the Empire.

Traces of the temple, described in old records as one of the finest buildings of the ancient capital, came to light when Caesar's Forum was uncovered a year ago. Cornices and tops of columns were exposed, evidence that the temple was erected at a lower level.

Great feasts are said to have taken place on the occasion of the dedication. Caesar attended. Elphinstone, the German writer, reported to have surrounded it with richly adorned boxes containing rings and gems of great value.

A statue of Venus attributed to Agostino, famous Greek sculptor, is supposed to have occupied the center of the temple. Caesar is reported to have surrounded it with richly adorned boxes containing rings and gems of great value.

$90,000,000 DAWES BANK LOAN DEFENDED BY R. F. C. HEAD

C. A. Miller Tells Senators He Doesn't Know Whether There Will Be Any Loss.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—A vigorous defense of the $90,000,000 loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Charles G. Dawes' Chicago Bank was made before the Senate Banking Subcommittee today by Charles A. Miller, president of the corporation.

He said in answer to questions of Senator Brookhart (Rep., Iowa), "I regret I wasn't here to vote for it and share in that courageous and brave action. It was one of the bravest things ever done in this country. If that loan had not been made the results would have been disastrous to the nation."

Brookhart said initial securities had been put by the bank by collateral and that he was informed the corporation would lose $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 on the advance.

"I don't know whether there will be any loss," Miller replied, "but certainly not such a staggering loss as that."

VOLUNTEER RELIEF WORKERS' COURSE TO OPEN TOMORROW

A training course for volunteer relief workers will be conducted under auspices of Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment, beginning tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Cabanne Branch Library, 1106 Union avenue.

Prof. Frank L. Bruno of Washington University will be in charge. Sessions will be held each Friday at the same hour for six weeks.

About 80 women, recruited from various organizations, have enrolled for the course. The relief agencies of Citizens' Committee are now being assisted by 124 volunteers.

NATIONAL CITY BANK OFFICERS ARE CALLED BY SENATE GROUP

Will Be Asked to Explain Publicly Bank's Policy on Silver.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Officers of the National City Bank will be asked to explain to a committee of Senators the public making of their own bank stocks.

Norbeck said the National City Bank stock was sold at a "phenomenal" high price and dropped to less than one-tenth of that high price.

The committee's investigation, Norbeck said, has shown that "some of the large banks were highly responsible for the wild stock market boom."

HITLER PROPOSES 4-YEAR PLANS FOR FARMER, WORKER

nobody wants peace and tranquillity more than I do—than the German people do."

By order of Chancellor Hitler, police in all parts of Prussia invaded Communist meeting places, in some cases the homes of suspected Communists, today, seizing papers and arresting their owners in an effort to put an end to disorders.

Next elections to replace the Reichstag dissolved by presidential decree were set for March 5. Between now and the day of the voting the Government will go to the people in an intensive campaign with the slogan "Hindenburg and Hitler."

The President dissolved the Reichstag because of the failure of negotiations to get the Communist party to support Hitler, which would have given him a majority. The decree of dissolution was issued, it is understood, at the urgent solicitation of Vice-Chancellor Franz von Papen.

Hitler Attacks Communists.
The long-standing quarrel between National Socialism and Communism was reflected in Hitler's proclamation, in which he bitterly inveighed against the Red movement and called on the people to combat it. "Give us four years," he said, "and I will deliver the proclamation in an international radio broadcast."

The parties of Marxism and its confederates have had 14 years to prove their ability," he said, "the result is a field of destruction."

"One year of Bolshevism would destroy Germany. The section of the world representing the richest and most beautiful culture in the world would be changed into chaos. Even the sufferings of the last 15 years could not be compared to the sufferings which the people who heart the Red Flag of destruction would be subjected."

Without describing his four-year plans in any detail Hitler said that one of them was to bring about the "salvation of the German people, to safeguard the nation's possibilities of sustenance and hence her very life." The second, he explained, was designed to effect the "salvation of the German people, to safeguard the nation's possibilities of sustenance and hence her very life."

In foreign relations, the Chancellor continued, Germany desires peace and anticipated the peace when the nations of the world would reduce their armaments in order to make it unnecessary for Germany to increase hers to the point of equality.

In the domestic financial situation, he promised that his government would do nothing to endanger the value of the German currency.

The Chancellor's appeal was assailed by the Social Democratic organ Vorwaerts, which said his "four-year plan is a new catchword borrowed from the Kaiser."

Another death resulted when a National Socialist in the Charlottenburg district of Berlin, At Essen, a Hitlerite was shot and seriously wounded by Communists.

They were wounded when police dispersed a Nazi-Communist affray at Wannsee-Bezirk. Several were injured in the Communist demonstration in Munich.

The Government contemplated a state funeral for a National Socialist policeman who was killed by three Hamburg (Prussia) policemen for shooting and killing three persons when attacked by a mob.

Seven Killed in a Day.
Yesterday's deaths due to disorders, mostly between Communists and Nazis, reached seven. A woman was shot to death in Duisburg at midnight.

Hitler today formed a new office of General Secretary of the National Socialist Party, formerly held by Capt. Otto Wagener, former head of the economic division. With Hitler's accession to the chancellorship his time for party matters was greatly curtailed.

Wagener will virtually run the party while Hitler remains the titular head.

Wagener comes of an industrial family and was a general staff officer during the war. In 1919 he became the leader of the so-called Baltic Free Corps, which stayed off a wave of Bolshevism threatening to inundate Germany.

He was badly wounded during Baltic fights with the Communists. He was arrested in 1920 because he was thought to be implicated in the Kapp rebellion.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The stock market continued to slide today, continuing the decline of the previous session. Several leading issues lost 1 to 2 points, and the lowest prices were reached in the last hour. The closing tone was heavy. Transfers approximated 200,000 shares.

The selling showed signs of dying up for a time in the early afternoon, but was resumed when it showed no power to rally. Di-

American Telephone broke points, dipping slightly under but it regained a point in the scalings. U. S. Steel common preferred were about steady at finish. Issues off about 2 points. New York traction also firmer. Principal commodities held fast. Wheat was helped by former reports of liberal Canadian exports, and closed about unchanged as did corn and cotton. Foreign exchanges generally w steady to firm against the dollar. The Canadian currency rallied, ending up 1 cent to 84 1/2 cents.

Boom in Gold Shares.
The bullish flurry in the mining issues was evidently a percussion of demonstrations of this group in British and Canadian markets. The South African gold shares recently boomed as the South African departed from the gold standard, and the sag in the Canadian dollar has increased the premium received for the yellow metal by the Dominion producers.

United Aircraft sold on news that the Senate had disapproved the $19,000,000 mail subsidy American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was again affected by the approval of the dividend meeting, slated for Feb. 15. ## FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The activity in gold mining shares on the London exchange was overshadowed by other sections on a strong buy which caused improvement in prices. Bursts of profit-taking, however, reduced gains somewhat and caused irregularity. Gilt-edged securities benefited by the influence of London.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—Although trading on the Bourse was hectic, prices showed a moderately bearish tendency. The firmness in re-supported other French issues. The closing was irregular.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—Trading on the Bourse was hesitant and the market closed slightly weaker.

Tire Prices Are Out.
By the Association Press.

AKRON, O., Feb. 2.—J. W. Thomas, president of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., today announced a 10 per cent reduction in tire prices.

Thomas said that the cut is only being made in lines comparable to those offered by the order firms but that his company's prices on first line tires are being adjusted to bring them into line with other grades.

Akron district rubber companies are expected to follow suit.

The Immediate Jump Raise in No Trumps

I HAVE explained that the immediate response of three no trumps over an opening bid of one no trump is a rather mild slam try in the Sims system. I was careful, however, to specify that this applies only when the opening bidder was dealer or second hand. I stated clearly that this jump raise was used for two distinct purposes, depending on the position of the opening bidder. Its uses as a slam try, when the responding hand has not had the opportunity to bid or pass, have, I hope, been explained in the last few articles. I will now deal with the much simpler situation which exists when you have passed, but your partner proceeds to open the bidding with one no trump in either third or fourth hand position.

The Circumstances Are Different When You Have Passed

When you have already passed, your partner is informed of the limitation of your hand. He does not know how weak you are, but he does know that you have decided that your hand did not warrant an opening first or second-hand bid. Nevertheless, if your hand is defensive in type, you may have passed three primary tricks—or two and a half primary tricks with considerable secondary or protective elements in addition.

If you have passed as strong a hand as this I believe you should immediately relieve your partner from guesswork by bidding three no trumps on your first response. He will know better than to construe this as a slam try and will read it as showing a hand just short of a slam bid. If there are slim hopes they will be apparent only to him, in view of his own holdings, and he must bid the slam immediately in his next bid if he considers it a reasonable chance in the light of what he knows about your hand.

(a) Your hand presumably does not contain a five-card suit headed by the queen; at any rate, he may not count on a five-card holding to work with.

(b) Your hand is therefore defensive in type, and contains as a minimum two and a half primary tricks plus some secondary or protective holdings. Let these be your minimum requirements for a jump raise in no trumps after having passed.

(c) Its maximum primary trick holdings are three primary tricks, possibly with a queen or jack and a ten or two, but anyhow not enough to cause you to bid a no trump originally.

He has, therefore, a certain amount of guess about your hand and should assume that it is a minimum as described above. He should not slam unless two and a half primary tricks plus, say, a queen or jack-ten will reasonably satisfy his needs for slam. With no long suit to work with, it is advisable to have something in reserve in slam bids.

The probable margin between (b) and (c) will supply this safety. Protecting the Third Hand Bid. Although I am very strict about refusing to shade original no trump bids materially, it is at times necessary to shade them slightly as already explained, in third-hand position. Failing any possible suit bid, you may open third hand on three primary tricks if they are not just three bare aces. If the responding hand, having passed, now bids only two no trumps, you may pass, as the game is very unlikely unless he could jump it to three in accordance with the requirements set forth above. This procedure is an important protection for the third-hand opening bid when a shaded one no trump is the only possible declaration. It relieves the opener from much guesswork on his rebid. It is a constructive safeguard. Be very careful, however, to remember whether or not your partner has already passed whenever he raises your one no trump to three no trumps, since the message conveyed is so very different in the two cases.

Tomorrow—Responses to One No Trump.

Coffee Custard

Scald two cups milk. Add three egg yolks beaten until light with a cup of sugar, a pinch of salt and one-half cup clear black coffee. Cook for two minutes, add one teaspoon vanilla and strain into custard cups. Stand the cups in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven until firm. If desired, whipped cream may be served on top of the chilled custard.

A HUSBAND HAS LOST HIS JOB BUT HIS WIFE RETAINS HER. SHOULD HIS PRIDE BE 'HURT' AT BEING SUPPORTED BY A WOMAN?

16 A COLLEGE DIPLOMA A GENUINE ASSET TO A WOMAN IN BUSINESS TODAY?

WRITE YES OR NO HERE

16 A SENSE OF HUMOR A SIGN OF INTELLIGENCE?

WRITE YES OR NO HERE

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1.—Not so his wife can notice it. He ought to thank his stars that he has a wife who is good enough to carry on. Mourning over his own lot, will only add to her burden. Men have always thought themselves better sports than women. If so, this is the chance to prove it by donning an apron, washing the dishes, doing the washing if necessary, and taking it on the chin, if not with a million dollar smile, at least with a ten cent grin.

2.—Yes. She starts out, on the average earning, about $250 more a year than the high school graduate and goes steadily, although slowly, half of women college graduates go into teaching, a poorly paid profession. Wherever college women have gone into business they have succeeded better than any other class of women.

3.—Yes, one of the best. Nearly all intelligence tests contain several jokes that have been tried on hundreds of thousands of people. Those who rate high on all other tests of intelligence are, almost without exception, chuck on the trigger look it. Yet society insists that she belongs on one, and Mama, herself, naturally believes that she rates one—and her children feel she should live up to it.

SO THEN, MAMA GETS MAD IF HER CHILDREN DON'T TREAT HER LIKE A SAINT; AND THE CHILDREN GET MAD BECAUSE SHE WON'T ACT LIKE A SAINT; AND EXHAUSTED, THEY MAKE A BEDLAM OF WHAT MIGHT BE THE HAPPIEST HOME.

All of which could be averted if we'd treat Mothers as People—and if Mothers, themselves, would consent to act as People.

Actually, in her secret heart, that's how every Mother wants to be treated. She isn't a saint, and she knows it. She longs to express her loneliness and bewilderment, her silliness, cowardice and conceit, as other people do—and be loved and petted and kidded as other people are, in return.

And, in their secret hearts, that is how her children wish to treat her. After the first baby years have passed, the modern youngster needs a comrade far more than he needs a Mother—a dear, commonplace, human comrade who won't sit in judgment or "pull an act," but will walk with him, shoulder to shoulder, through the difficult years.

That's what mothers really want. That's what youngsters really want. Yet that old stupid tradition of the Pedestal still separates and estranges them. Mother goes through life expecting to be treated like a demigod, exasperated with her children because they won't treat her like one—yet unable to act like one. And her children go through life expecting her to act like one—and exasperated because she won't!

What's the cure? Cut out the hokum! Face facts! Mothers are People. They weren't made to be saints. If you're a mother, BE YOUR BIOLOGY! Don't try to be a saint. You know you can't get by with it. And don't get mad if your children won't treat you as one.

If you're a son or daughter, remember your mother is a person. Those lovely virtues which you think mothers should possess would doubtless make matters most convenient and delightful for you. But they'd raise Cain with any female's natural disposition. So don't expect out of your mother a standard of behavior which you couldn't possibly endure for an hour yourself. Don't feel that just because she won't fit your pretty picture of what a Mother Ought To Be. Take her as she is, and treat her as you'd treat any other worthy woman in need of your love and understanding—TREAT HER AS YOU'D LIKE TO BE TREATED YOURSELF! LIVE AND LET LIVE—that's the Best Medicine for what ails most mothers and children. (Copyright, 1933.)

WHERE ARE OUR POETS? THE President said recently that what we need in America today is a great poem. Not an epic, perhaps, but a song more simple and homely, with a lift in its lines to lift us out of our doldrums. Such a song as boys and girls will recite—"poem" was the word he used—in school on Friday afternoons, if such things are done in these days; a song to go running from heart to heart and heart to heart.

No doubt; but where are our poets? Why is their music muffled, silent, or sad? It makes one think of the old Gaelic song which tells of the music playing a harp to her children. They bend their ears above the harp as she touches with white hands the trembling strings. She stops. They take the harp but cannot find the song they love. "Why," they ask, "does it not answer us? Show us the string where dwells the song." She bids them search until she returns, and their tiny fingers wander among the wires, seeking the lost song—like the poets of our day.

Why should it be so? Why have we no poet to set our souls dancing before the Lord, as Browning did the men of his day? One of our poets has told us why we cannot find the string where dwells the song, in a letter to young poets. The poet of today, he tells us, has lost faith; he no longer believes in his art nor in himself. Therefore he cannot charm or please or entertain; he cannot exult as the great poets did in other days.

If you're tired of hearing or reading about brushing, do let the permanent wave go to you. Try some 60 or 100 strokes tonight. Up and out. Bend forward from the waist and let your hair fall over forehead. Brush with long, sweeping strokes over scalp and crown. Hair and after every few strokes wipe the brush on a clean cloth or towel you have handy. Brushing is to your hair what exercise is to the body, fresh air to your general health, a facial to your skin. It's one grand pep rally. It cleanses, distributes oil evenly, stimulates the circulation through the scalp, nourishes the hair roots. It's just fine, that's all, and you can change the maximum from "seeing" to "brushing" is believing. Most women hesitate to brush after the permanent, but there's no reason why you shouldn't brush before.

Brush every night and morning, and a few times a week massage your scalp with fingertips. Once a week or once every two weeks (if your hair keeps quite clean) follow the brushing and then the massage with a hot oil treatment. Separate the hair into strands of about an inch wide and with a pad of cotton apply the oil, so hot as you can stand without scorching, along the scalp. Some women like to use a medicine dropper for this purpose. Let

Mothers Are Only People.

IT'S hard for Edith to remember a time when she didn't despise her mother. Of course, she loves her, too. Quess how one can love and despise a person at the same time! But always there was that growing contempt. How could she help it—with such a Mother?

Mothers, Edith felt, should be brave and patient, sweet and loyal. One ought to be able to worship one's mother. But what could worship a mother who was always complaining, nagging, whining, and scolding? Yet I've worked myself up to skin and bone.

And so it goes! Rebellious children. Resentful mothers. Home life one long brawl and battle! Miserable situation—yet you've seen it scores of times. Perhaps lived in it.

But why do families get that way? What's the answer? The answer is so simple that most of us don't intend to occupy pedestals. Which, of course, was and is very flattering to Mama herself.

But, unfortunately, mothers were not intended to occupy pedestals. They have all the normal human cussedness and silliness, and a healthy need to express the same. Nothing could possibly cramp a Mother's style worse than a pedestal. Yet society insists that she belongs on one, and Mama, herself, naturally believes that she rates one—and her children feel she should live up to it.

SO THEN, MAMA GETS MAD IF HER CHILDREN DON'T TREAT HER LIKE A SAINT; AND THE CHILDREN GET MAD BECAUSE SHE WON'T ACT LIKE A SAINT; AND EXHAUSTED, THEY MAKE A BEDLAM OF WHAT MIGHT BE THE HAPPIEST HOME.

THAT painted look is to disappear from women's lips. A new lipstick is said to be responsible—one of those magic affairs to be applied in the morning, wiped off with cleansing tissue, and to be forgotten for the remainder of the day. A look of naturalness is supposed to result. Toilet goods counters are all agog about it.

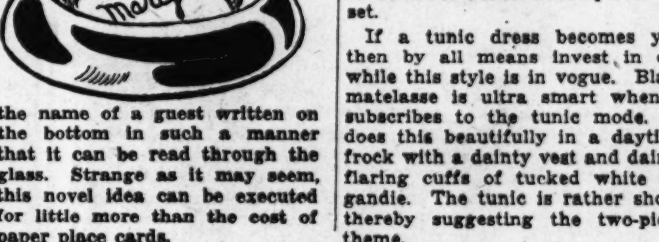

Among the suits with capes that are swarming into town is one with parts to be worn even now while the cape part is saved for balmy days. A navy twisted silk resembling wool so closely that it takes a second look to designate its family history is used for the skirt and hip-length cape. Red and white silk in a diagonal stripe contributes an accommodating blouse which may be worn tucked in or with the tail out. With the former style, the effect is quite tailored, and with the latter the effect is that of a complete dress. The cape lining is striped like the blouse and would be fun to wear reversed.

Seafaring ladies will be packing their bags when they see the new anchor pins in colored glass. These are about the nicest little trifles to appear in many a day. Life buoy bracelets that are made of leather with metal rims come in red, white and blue and therefore prompt cheers from those who have an opportunity to set sail in fashion.

Pottery boxes which stores display for bridge prizes, not caring whether they are used for cigarettes or trinkets, are becoming generous with their decorations. Formerly they offered a design only on the outside, but now the inside of the lid also is decorated. And, price, instead of going up, has been coming down.

The piece de resistance of many a smart luncheon is not the salad but the plates on which the salad is served. Milk white glass couldn't do better than to provide these plates, adding for decoration a fill-gree border. No matter what color scheme the rest of your luncheon may have, the salad course should emphasize the style importance of white.

One of the best ways to impress guests with your cleverness as a hostess is to give them something individuals to take home. Those ash tray place favors were designed with this in mind. They are made of modest glass tinted any color and have the name of a guest written on the bottom in such a manner that it can be read through the glass. Strange as it may seem, this novel idea can be executed for little more than the cost of paper place cards.

If a tunic dress becomes you, then by all means invest in one while this style is in vogue. Black matelasse is ultra smart when it subsides to the tunic mode. It does this beautifully in a daytime frock with a dainty vest and dainty flaring cuffs of tucked white organdie. The tunic is rather short, thereby suggesting the two-piece theme.

THIS is one of the modern patchwork quilts that you will enjoy making. It is entirely different, and offers you an excellent opportunity of combining plain colors and prints together in making the Chinese swinging lantern. The lanterns are patchwork, and then applied on the plain blocks. There are four different shaped lanterns, and by making five of each design and alternating them, you will have a gay colorful quilt. The patchwork border makes the pieces set in the four corners of the block and completes the quilt.

For the patchwork border cutting guide, with seams allowed, order border No. 808. The 12-inch quilting design for your plain blocks is 10c for the tracing pattern. Order No. 806. Twelve-inch.

A 32-page book, showing in colors a variety of designs for quilts, patchwork, embroidery, etc., is available to readers. ### Everyday Proprieties

Dear Mrs. Post: I give up a dear friend who is financially so much better off than I am? She takes me out to lunch and invites me to her house for meals. I can't afford to return all these kindnesses, and yet I hate to think of losing her deliberately. Is there a way out?

Answer: Don't get your sense of values so foolishly mixed. If she did not want to invite you, she wouldn't, would she? There are hundreds of ways whereby you can repay your friend—by being an amusing, sympathetic, adaptable and charming companion. What is there in the world has money-spending to do with friendship?

My dear Mrs. Post: Is it bad form to say when leaving neighbors after visiting them, "Do come over any time." Or would it be better not to say anything and then simply invite them later?

Answer: It is not bad form, especially if you are merely asking people to come to see you. But to say, "Come to dinner any time," would feel they could accept. This ambiguous invitation should be properly followed sooner or later by a definite invitation.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a young married woman living in a small town where all my women friends are much older. They all call each other by their first names informally. Should I continue to say Mrs. So-and-so until they ask me to do otherwise? To me it seems disrespectful to do anything else and yet I feel so formal.

Answer: You should never call an older person by her (or his) first name unless you are told you may. You might, however, make up nicknames which are less formal. Perhaps some of them will then tell you to say Jane or Mary, or perhaps they will like their nicknames.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been invited to give a luncheon to a group of friends the week-end with some friends of the whom I have met only once. Do you consider this a proper invitation, or should it have come direct from their friends?

Answer: They ought at least to telephone you or write you, or in some way confirm their invitation. But if they are very informal people, it is much better to waive ceremony than to make any to-do about it so long as you are sure of the genuineness of their invitation. (Copyright, 1933.)

"MOIST THROAT" STOPPED MY COUGHING SPELLS!

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny "botles" continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues... until you "cough cold." Then these pores clog. Phlegm collects. Dangerous germs find a breeding place. Throat, irritation and coughing set in. To cure your cough you must increase the flow of your throat's natural moisture. "Moist Throat" is the only remedy that can be applied to the throat. It contains no drugs which may "dead" the nerves... but don't get at the root of the trouble! FARRINGTON, a scientific remedy, is the extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of throat moisture and brings quick relief naturally.

If your throat's raw or dry, take a few spoonfuls of "Moist Throat." It's safe, even for children. At drug stores, 60c.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

My Dear Mrs. Carr: I may be permitted to say that this is a theory concerning A. Anachronism's perplexities and will you give me your candid opinion as to whether or not I am correct?

There is a lad for every lassie in this world of ours, but the inquiry lies in the fact that, unbeknownst to Jack's girl becomes infatuated with Joe before she meets Jack. Sometimes Jack never meets his true ideal.

Everyone is entitled to his own conception of life, and as gleaned from influence and environment. Somewhere the girl for "A. A." exists. As for me, I, too, have a passionate interest in girls, with one exception. I consider myself fortunate in having found the girl who fits my ideal, which I began constructing when I was very young. And I try to be her ideal in all things and she tries to be mine. And although we do not always succeed, at times when we succeed, we have done so without losing our individualities. Physical attraction was primary when we met. There's no secret to it. But after this, when you find someone you want to get along with, it's comparatively easy to get along.

We indulge in whatever sports and amusements we can afford, and are not averse to interest in many things. We've even learned to discuss politics and religion without getting excited about it. We are only fanatical about one subject—that is, each other. We are not mutually, but we are enjoy things and I hope we never shall be, until we are both 95 or 96, and can look back over the past and say, "Well, we had pretty good times together."

Why don't I marry the girl? I am flat broke and have been virtually so since the fall of 1929. We are a pretty serious pair after all and she's a pretty serious girl. I am leisure and hastening to marry the landlady. One cannot budget an income until one gets it.

PLATO.

My dear Mrs. Carr: Y problem is extremely difficult. My father died a few months before I was born and left me with five or six children. When I was 18 months old, my mother took us children to an orphanage in St. Louis, for what reason I don't know. I was adopted from the home about a month later and reared by the top of the one I found. After I was grown, I found out I was an adopted child, and finally went to St. Louis to secure employment. After I did this I decided to let each and every orphanage until I found the one I came from. To my great surprise, I found that I had two sisters and two brothers, who were left there the same time my mother left me. I wrote them, but none of them knew where mother was.

Mrs. Carr, is there any way I can find out where she lives now? All this happened 22 years ago. We are poor and cannot stand any expense. So can't you help me out? Wishing you much success in your wonderful work. FERNIE.

I believe, if the orphan's home will give you your mother's real name (unless you know it already), you might get help from the Police Department. They sometimes have quite complete records of lost persons and can make inquiries in other cities.

Dear Martha Carr: During the Christmas holidays a fine grape wine was spilled on a delicate piece of calico. I would appreciate it very much if you would tell me how to remove the stain.

Does olive oil help make the eyelashes grow? Will it also rid one of that terrible thing called dandruff? Do you need a ticket or pass to see the Radio stars at KMOX? Or the other stations. Yours 'til I need some more information. M. L.

When wine is spilled on white cloth it should be soaked at once in cold water, or boiling water. Try this soaking process, then use a bleach which any druggist will sell you. I think you would have to be careful about applying any kind of oil to the eyelashes. Petroleum jellies are said to make the lashes grow, but there is always danger of getting the oil into the eye, and it doesn't seem to be important enough to take the chance. A combination of olive oil and castor oil, half and half, is very good for the scalp. If it is the scalp fine dandruff which you are trying to get rid of, this undoubtedly will help very much. You can use it the night before shampooing. You might ask these stations if visitors are allowed.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I AM a girl 15 years old and I wish you could find me a pair of toe-dancing shoes, size 7. There may be a pair hiding in somebody's cellar or attic, don't you think? A girl I have known for about six years just passed me by without speaking. For some unknown reason, my mother thought why she is so unfriendly and try to settle the difficulty. WONDERING.

SECOND CHOICE

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

THE mail carrier left a stack of letters on Judith's desk every morning at 9:30. Bills, checks, the usual advertisements which come to a doctor's office, now and then a personal note for Mitchell.

Every day until recently she had enjoyed looking through them as part of her job, sorting them into piles, putting the checks together to take to the bank. Doris usually took them from her to put on the doctor's desk. But the mail didn't interest her any more.

It frightened her when she saw it waiting for her on the desk. The sight of the mail man entering the reception room, a rubber band around the letters that were for Dr. Mitchell, stopping for a moment to say, "Good morning," or "Good afternoon," filled her with dismay. Donna's letter had done that. The fear that there would be another like it among the white envelopes that lay before her. Looking through the pile twice a day, hurriedly the first time, almost holding her breath, sighing with relief when all the mail was for Craig Mitchell.

One afternoon a messenger boy came in with a special delivery letter, and she could hardly find strength to take it from him. For a long time it lay face down on her desk until she had courage to turn it over and see that it was for Doris. Sometimes at night she dreamed of Donna's letter, saw the backhand writing before her, and woke up shivering.

A week went by, but although there was no further warning from Toby's wife, Judith's apprehension remained. It didn't make any difference that the accusations in the letter were mostly false. The fact remained that Donna believed them. There was no word from Toby, but Judith didn't expect any. She was happier, except for the letter, than she had been in a long time. Craig Mitchell managed to run into see her every evening. There were flowers with his card in the box waiting for her each night when she reached home.

NONSENSICAL gifts he brought her. A doll with tawny hair, because he insisted it looked like her; a pair of fur-lined gloves she was to wear when they went out riding; a book he wasn't able to resist because the name of its heroine was Judith; a chocolate pie because he liked chocolate pies and she had to learn to like them, too; a bottle of thick whipping cream which she was to drink immediately, because that particular day she had seemed thinner and paler to him.

He couldn't wire her pinning away. A tiny, china, wire-haired fox terrier because that was the kind of dog they would have some day. The next night a china cat to keep it company. The cat, china mouse for the cat to play with.

"You're much too attentive," Judith protested. "You're spoiling me fearfully."

"I'll always spoil you," Judith. "You're made to be spoiled." Leaving her early because he had some late calls to make, touching the bracelet as he left, asking her as they stood for a moment on the porch whether she still liked him. Satisfied when she said she did, running down the steps and jumping into his car.

"He seems such a fine man," Judith. Mrs. Avery said after one of his quick visits when Judith was opening the bottle of perfume he had left. Sweet pea, because it reminded him of her. The bedroom was filled with its fragrance.

"He is—"

At the office he was circumspect, very proper, although there was always a twinkle in his eyes as he approached the girl's desk. When he came to the house he was a delightful companion, interesting, charming, full of fun.

"If you're shopping tomorrow noon, you might match this for me," Mrs. Avery held up a sample of silk. "I feel better now, and I ought to be starting my Christmas sewing. Two yards, Judith, if you please, and be sure it matches."

The girl took the piece of flesh crepe de chine.

"The Fair will have it," Mrs. Avery said. "That's where I got it."

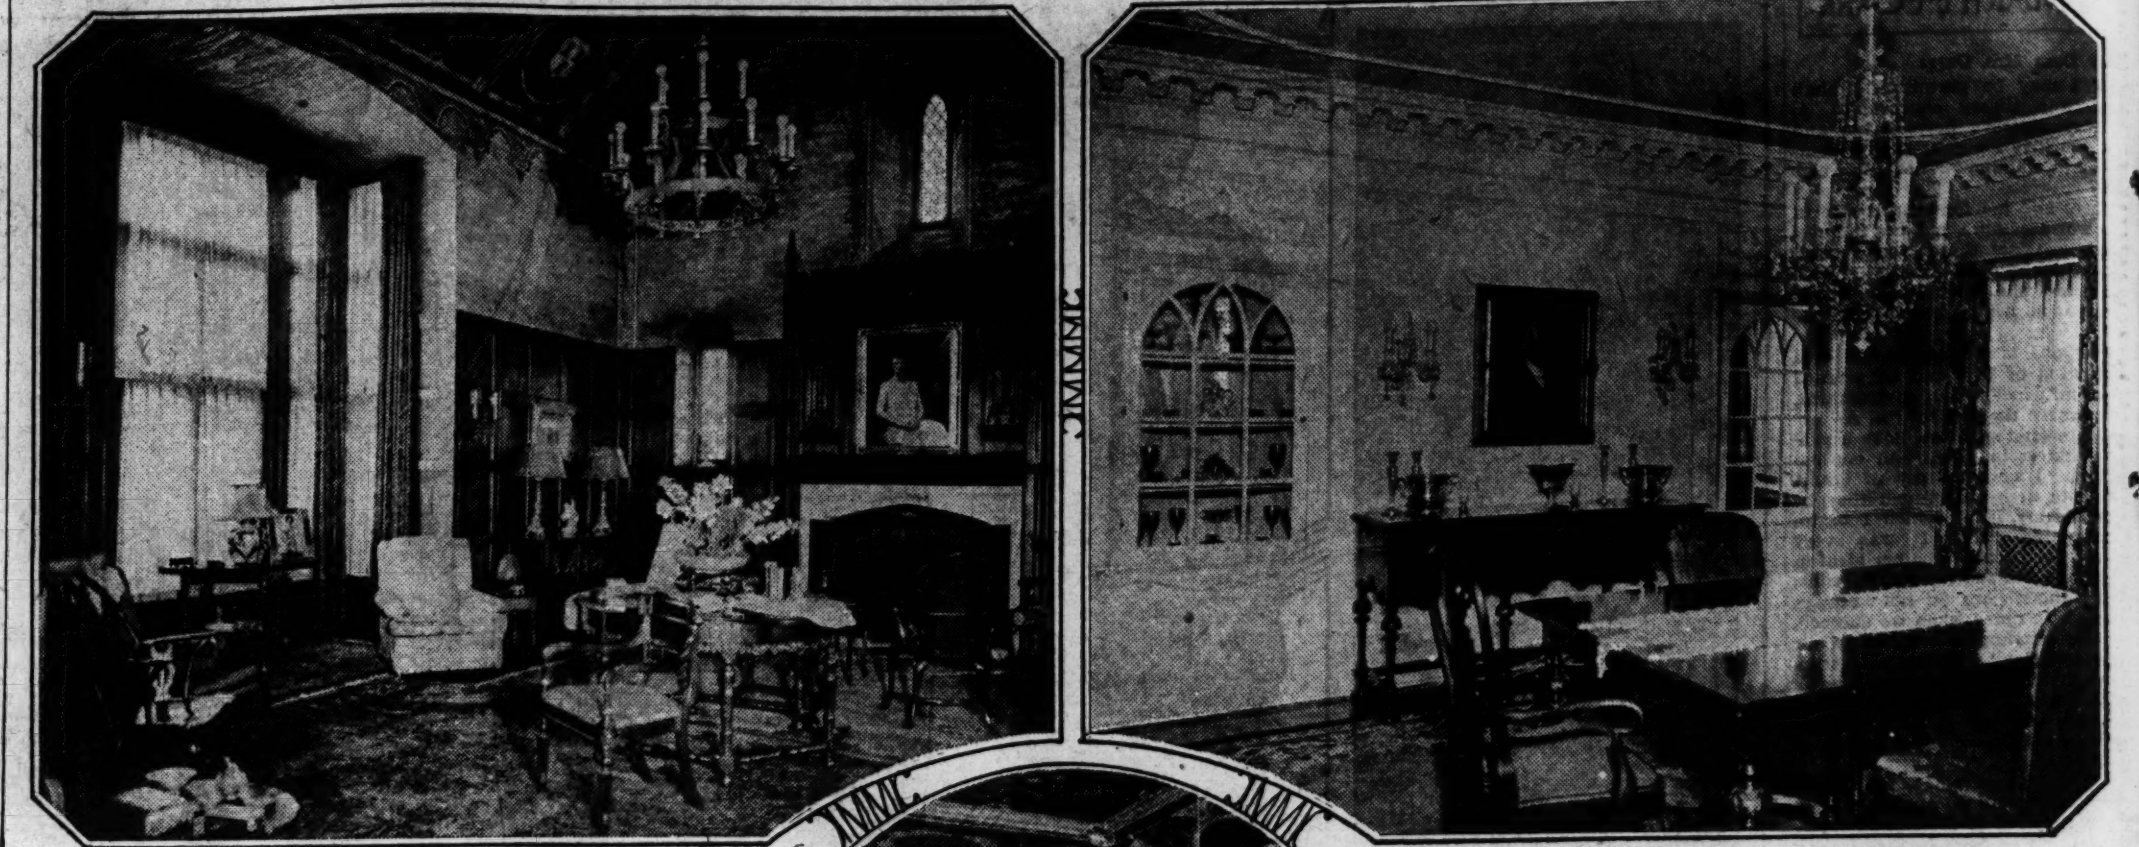

So the next noon Judith snatched a quick lunch at a drug store counter and hurried to The Fair with the sample in her purse. The store was crowded and she made her way to the elevators. Not too much time—because she always tried to be at the office early from lunch. Doris went later and the nurse didn't like to wait.

TWO elevators went on without her, and she was getting impatient while the third was being filled. Had her mother said two yards? Stepping into the rear, and stood there jammed against the wall, her right shoulder brushing a pale beige lapin coat, and her left a red fox fur. She thought of Donna when she glanced idly at the coat. The next moment she knew it was Donna standing next to her. Their eyes met at the same time. "Oh, hello," Judith began lamely. The black eyes never wavered. They continued their insolent stare. The head in the pale beige that matched the coat didn't move, neither did Donna's lips. Donna hadn't spoken. She wouldn't speak.

"Second floor" the operator called harshly, and the car stopped exactly. Material on the third, but Judith didn't care. She couldn't

Handsome Jacobean Living Room Features Residence of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Strauch

Living room in the John Strauch residence showing the huge oriole window which is repeated on the other side of the room.

By JOSEPHINE WALTER.

IT is not often in this feverish age that one comes upon a room that is so filled with tranquil beauty that the very walls seem to echo an invitation to relaxation and calm repose. Such a room is the living room in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Strauch, in Huntleigh Village.

This room, designed in the Jacobean style of the English Renaissance, is particularly notable for its handsome proportions and the authenticity of the background. The two-story height easily accommodates the "minstrel" balcony which was an integral part of the room of this period, as well as the two tremendous oriole windows at either side. The fireplace, which is the focal point of interest, is in scale with the other features of the room.

Oak paneling covers two-thirds of the wall, with the upper part and the ceiling being of plaster. This ceiling is truly gorgeous. The two large windows are hung with red, blue and gold, set off in squares by gold moldings; the same being re-echoed in the fine Oriental rugs on the floor. The upper part of the cream-colored walls have also been stenciled in a Jacobean design, this design being repeated around a tiny leaded-glass window, above the fireplace.

The mantel-piece is entirely of the same oak which panels the rest of the room, except for the opening which is of carved stone. Linen-fold paneling has been introduced into the design of this chimney-piece and the top part has been finished in points reminiscent of the Gothic period. The wooden balcony with its turned post rails has a fine old tapestry hung on the wall behind it.

Wrought iron side brackets and a tremendous iron ring chandelier complete the setting of this room. Pieces from the William and Mary and Queen Anne periods have been included with the Jacobean furnishings to prevent any feeling of heaviness which might result from a too slavish following of that age of oak. In fact, even an Italian chest of the fourteenth century has been used and harmonizes perfectly with a big center table and chest which are of the true Jacobean period.

Reds, yellows and blues have been used throughout the room with accenting notes of gold. The huge windows have been hung with red, blue and gold, set off in squares by gold moldings; the same being re-echoed in the fine Oriental rugs on the floor. ### Varied Play Opportunities

IF a child has dolls and house-keeping toys, but no balls or skates, or if he has an express wagon and a tricycle, but no really good books or a set of paints, he is not well equipped with play materials.

Children need a rich variety of play materials for two outstanding reasons.

One is that it requires the stimulus of many different kinds of play opportunity to bring out all the latent possibilities for learning and enjoyment and character development in the child.

The youngster who has no chance to swing and climb, to develop balance and dexterity with wagon and bicycle will certainly be less skillful than his neighbor who has a chance to learn these things.

The child who has no fairy tales, no books of adventure, of science or biography will have a poorer cultural background for future appreciations than the child who has these things. The child whose play equipment omits constructive materials such as blocks misses a whole line of imaginative thinking and of learning to embody his fantasies in concrete form.

The other equally important reason why children should have a wide range of play equipment is that only through having an adequate variety of materials always on hand can they find just that activity day by day and hour by hour which satisfies the need of the moment.

The child is always busy working out problems incident to the fact that he is a child living in a grown-up world. His play activities play a big part in helping him to make his adjustment. If these are limited he has just that much less opportunity for tapping off his emotional conflicts in harmless and even constructive channels.

turned in. However, if she would give her name and address, Judith did, and to describe it more fully she gave the inscription on the inside of the gold band, "Ralph to Louise."

Streamlined Coats Shown Without Fur

PARIS.

NEW streamlined coats without a single touch of fur were featured in fashion shows here as an economical offering of elegance for the spring of 1935. They were designed on slim, body-fitting lines with the silhouette unbroken by extraneous touches. Some were collarless and others were finished with cloth scarfs. The fabrics were of supple wools and the colors were bright red, navy, beige and gray.

New ensembles combining plain wool skirts and matching seven-eighths length coats capable of being worn with many blouses or frocks were shown as a second economy gesture. Economy novelties also were marked in long-sleeved frocks of beige, blue and black wools which were accented by belts of woven string of many colors or scarfs lined with plaid kitchen gingham.

Raisin Jumbles (With sour cream.) One cup fat, two cups sugar, two eggs, beaten; two-thirds cup thick sour cream, one teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon vanilla, one-half teaspoon lemon extract, four cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons soda, one cup chopped raisins. Cream the fat and add sugar. Mix well and add eggs and cream. Beat two minutes. Add rest of ingredients and mix lightly. Drop portions from end of spoon onto greased baking sheet. Bake 12 minutes in moderate oven.

Another authority states: "It seems improbable that the hair should lose its color. The hair always retains the color it had from the very beginning to the very end. There is no proof of circulation within the hair which would make it possible for any particular growth of hair to change color or to get gray overnight."

Y. even if one cannot turn gray overnight, there is no doubt that debilitating illnesses, as well as worry, overwork, grief, anxiety, and nervous strain strongly predispose to quick hair graying.

The actual graying, however, does not involve change of the color of the hair already grown, but plies the growth of new hair without pigment.

In the ordinary graying of the hair, particularly if the hair turned gray while the individual is still relatively young, the dominant cause appears to be an hereditary predisposition.

Sudden Hair Graying

AMONG the curiosities in this world, there is the so-called Hindu rope trick, about which much has been written but which to this day remains unauthenticated.

Allegedly, the Hindu magicians are able to toss a flexible rope into the air and have it remain hanging in the air fixed to nothing and yet rigid enough to allow a boy to climb on it.

It seems impossible to find a credible witness who has ever seen the very beginning to the very end, from time to time, it is mentioned in the press and elsewhere.

Something akin to this is the story of hair turning white overnight.

Byron in his poem "The Prisoner of Chillon" mentions such an occurrence and recently the subject came up in litigation before the court of appeals of New York.

Even medical authorities disagree.

Dr. Sutton states in a paragraph on grayness of the hair that "sudden bleaching of the hair is an extremely rare phenomenon but it undoubtedly does occur in some instances."

Another authority states: "It seems improbable that the hair should lose its color. The hair always retains the color it had from the very beginning to the very end. There is no proof of circulation within the hair which would make it possible for any particular growth of hair to change color or to get gray overnight."

grams continue three nights a week, makes her debut as a movie star in "Hello, Everybody," a picture written especially for her by Fannie Hurst, which comes to the Ambassador Theater tomorrow.

Miss Smith, born in Virginia and raised in Washington, D. C., has been singing ever since she was a girl in pigtail. She came naturally by her ear for music, and by her ability to sing. As a child she sang at church and charitable functions.

At 17, she was signed for a role in "Honey-Moon Lane," musical comedy hit, and later was featured in
"Hit the Deck" and "Flying High."
Shortly thereafter, she went into radio, to win unprecedented success.

In "Hello, Everybody" she plays the role of a farm girl who leads a band of her neighbors in their battle with a power company which seeks to appropriate their land for use in a hydro-electric development.

THE Missouri continuing its policy two feature pictures offers
"Lucky Devils" and "No More Orchids" on the program starting today. "Lucky Devils" is a saga of the Hollywood stunt men, the inside story of the men who risk their lives for a thrilling scene may be filmed. William Gargan and Bill Boyd have the male leads as the stunt men; and when there is need for a train to be wrecked, an airplane to be smashed, or an auto to be driven 60 miles an hour over a cliff, they are called upon to perform the act. Dorothy Wilson, who made her screen debut in "Age of Consent" has the feminine lead. Roscoe Ates is also in the cast, and his stuttering tongue provides the laughs. The other feature on the Missouri screen is Grace Perkins' story, "No More Orchids." It stars Carole Lombard.
In this picture, Miss Lombard portrays a wealthy and pampered girl who lives a gay and carefree life.
The supporting cast of players includes Walter Connolly and Lyle Talbot.

THE Grand Central Theater will again enter the field of amusement beginning on Friday evening, Feb. 10, at which time Noel Coward's mighty drama "Cavalcade" will open a two-day engagement for a run of several weeks.

Some Soup Recipes For Winter Days

SOUP seems to be able to understand a tired heart. Rich and warm, it will soothe away the strained nerves from a trying day and put peaceful thoughts in the head.
That's why every woman who strives for peace and contentment should put soup on her dinner menu every few days.
Cream of fresh spinach has a delicacy that denies its really substantial qualities. It should be rather or thick with briefly cooked chopped spinach.
Wash spinach carefully and place in large pot without any water at all. Dust lightly with salt. Cook until the leaves have wilted—about 10 minutes. Turn into chopping bowl and chop fine.
Then drain. In a saucepan melt one tablespoon of butter and stir in one heaping teaspoon of flour.
Then add one pint of milk.
When the milk is warm, add two cups of chopped spinach. Stir well and bring just below a boil. Salt and pepper. Thin if this recipe is too thick for you. This amount will make four good servings.

Creamed cabbage soup has its own special virtues. Shred a small cabbage fine and plunge into rapidly boiling water. Cook for 10 minutes only, then drain and mash with a fork. In a large pot, place one cup of mashed potatoes and slowly stir in one quart of milk.
Add one tablespoon of butter, salt, pepper and one tablespoon of grated cheese. Then toss in the cabbage and cook over a slow fire for 15 minutes. Stir up from the bottom several times to prevent sticking and burning.
Southern onion soup is another friend of the weary in heart. Slice four small onions fine and brown

D. S. Barry, Sergeant-At-Arms, Called Before Bar to Explain Statements in Magazine Article He Wrote.

NORRIS MOVES HE BE OUSTED

Defendant Declares He Used Word "Crooks" Thoughtlessly in Saying That There Were Few Such in Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, was placed on trial in the Senate today in a hurriedly called special sitting and asked to explain a magazine article in which he hinted some members of Congress received pay for their votes.

Previously La Guardia (Rep.) New York, in the House had termed the article, appearing in the New Outlook, edited by Alfred E. Smith, a reflection upon the honor of Congress.

Barry was taken before the Senate and sworn after Senator Watson (Rep.) Indiana, the Republican leader, had read parts of the article and demanded that he be tried.

After brief debate, Barry, a gray-haired man, stylishly dressed, was taken before the chair and the Senate resolved itself into a "court of trial."

Senator Ashurst (Dem.) Arizona, suggested that all questions presented to Barry be in writing. Borah (Rep.) Idaho, suggested that Barry should be asked if he desired to proceed immediately or to have time to obtain counsel.

Moses (Rep.) New Hampshire, presiding, put that question to Barry, who was standing near the rostrum.

In a halting voice, Barry replied: "I have no desire to have counsel. There is no real explanation to make."

The Ashurst motion then was defeated.

Says He Meant to Defend Senate. In reply to questions by Watson, Barry said that in writing the article his idea was "to defend the Senate from a popular belief that there are crooks and grafters here."

He added: "I have said many times that there are no crooks among us." But in an almost inaudible tone, he went on to say there was a "general belief" to that effect.

"Did you write this article at the request of the publishers of the magazine?" Barkley (Dem.) Kentucky, asked. "Not this particular article," Barry replied.

"You wrote it under contract with the publishers?" Barkley asked. "Yes, sir," Barry replied. "You wrote it for remuneration?" "Yes, sir."

"How many articles were you to write?" "I haven't any idea."

During the questioning, Barry stood facing the chamber, resting on the clerk's desk below the Vice-President's chair. He fingered papers on the edge of the desk with a trembling hand.

Used "Crooks" Thoughtlessly. "What were you to be paid?" Barkley persisted. "I don't exactly know. I was very much surprised when they were printed. I had a general contract at $250 an article."

"How many articles were you to write?" Lou were to keep on as long as they were printed?" "Unless I ran out of subject matter."

"I gather the idea you were intending to defend the Senate and House by saying there were only a few crooks?" "That was my motive. I had heard for many years about the charges. It is taught in the schools. One young man told me his professor said Congressmen were crooks and took money for their votes. All young men grow up with that belief. The words were thoughtlessly used. I didn't have in mind any person when I wrote it."

"You have had experience in writing," Barkley continued. "Reading that language, what other meaning could an intelligent person get?" "I don't know that any other construction could be put upon it, but I didn't intend to say that."

Watson asked Barry if he had written that "there are not many Senators or Representatives who accept money for their votes."

"Yes, sir, I did."

In response to a question as to
